Rebels in House Win Fight to Loosen 'Gag'; Works Up Tomorrow

Steam Roller Tactics of Administration Are Assailed.

Roosevelt Calls For Compromise

Urges That No Strings Be Tied to Measure; Session Stormy.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Leather-lunged House Democratic rebels yesterday wrung a compromise from majority leaders as members of both parties combined to limit the President's authority under the $4,880,000,000 works bill.

The outstanding result of the first big insurgent protest movement of the session was agreement by the majority caucus to sharply relax an originally airtight gag rule. Three of the most controversial sections of the measure were thrown open to amendment from the floor.

As the uprising assumed serious proportions President Roosevelt called in Speaker Byrns and Chairman Buchanan, House Appropriations Committee, to discuss terms of a truce. Mr. Roosevelt urged no strings be tied to the funds, as informed the bill would not ...ssed before tomorrow, instead o... yesterday, as intended.

With several irate members still shouting for recognition to assail the Administration's steam-roller tactics, the caucus adjourned at 6 p. m., after a two-hour session. The bellowing voices of chagrined members could be heard a hundred yards down the corridor, though all doors of the House chamber were closed.

Amended Gag Rule Vote.

An amended gag rule was approved by 190 to 35. Later it was disclosed 39 members asked to be excused from voting as a unit with the majority because of campaign or platform pledges. Ten or more others, unable to gain the floor, were expected to seek similar freedom by letter.

Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee, after much backing and filling, was instructed to present a resolution today for immediate consideration of the works program, with limitation of discussion of the rule to an hour and of general debate to three hours. The rule would permit only committee amendments on all but three of the eight sections and but one motion to recommit.

Speaker Byrns disclosed that the Appropriations Committee would offer an amendment to strike from the bill the types of projects to be undertaken, such as slum clearance and rural electrification. That phase of the compromise was a sop to disgruntled members who wished inclusion of specific authority for rivers and harbors, irrigation and other works outlays. Instead, the bill will list only such general purposes as to provide "relief from the hardships attributable to widespread unemployment."

"I'm confident the bill is constitutional," Byrns observed. "It was written and rewritten five times by able lawyers."

No Obstacles, Their Demand.

O'Connor and other Byrns lieutenants told the caucus the members were elected to support the President and to provide relief for needy. They insisted no obstacles should be placed in the path of Mr. Roosevelt in administering the funds as he believed best.

Chairman Connery, House Labor Committee, and others who disliked the way the measure was drafted, unappeased by O'Connor's admonitions, bitterly fought plans to stifle debate. The diminutive Connery

Bombing Fails In Skyscraper

Terminal Tower Explosive Found as Thousands Go About Their Work.

Cleveland, Jan. 22 (AP).—A possible attempt to blow up Cleveland's tallest office building, the 55-story Terminal Tower, was discovered late today when a bomb containing six sticks of dynamite, attached to a partly burned fuse, was found on the sixth floor of the structure.

Thousands of workers were in the building at the time, unaware how close they may have been to a potential catastrophe.

Ralph A. Sharp, vice president of the Cleveland Terminal Building Co., said he supposed a crank was responsible. He said charwomen had been on strike for several weeks, but added he was confident this, the company's only labor trouble, had no connection with the bomb.

The Terminal Tower, beneath which are the Cleveland Union Railroad terminals, is 765 feet high, and is owned by the O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen railroad interests.

President Sanctions Redraft Of Security Plan in Congress

Adherence to Routine Provisions Waived by White House; Both Houses Indicate Substantial Amendments.

By Robert C. Albright.

Congress yesterday was given what leaders described as a "free hand" in revising and amending the President's social security program, as two congressional committees pressed witnesses for details on the "basic plan" submitted by the Administration.

No rigid adherence to routine provisions of the New Deal bill was demanded by Secretary of Labor Perkins or Senator Robert F. Wagner, the measure's co-author, in testimony respectively before the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committee.

Both Administration spokesmen called only for an experimental beginning on a program they hope to expand and develop in future years as a buffer not only against unemployment and old-age poverty, but a stabilizing weapon to ward off periodic depressions.

It became apparent last night that the Wagner-Lewis draft will be substantially amended, both in committees and on the floor of the two chambers, as word went around that the President himself does not hold hard and fast to the text of the original draft.

Developments yesterday were:

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means committee, forecast broad committee changes after "at least" two weeks of hearings. He indicated a new bill will subsequently be introduced by the committee, embodying all changes.

Secretary Perkins told the Ways and Means group it "is not possible to recommend a 100 per cent program as a panacea against future depressions," but indorsed the Wagner-Lewis measure as "a safe, reasonable and flexible bill, within a pattern peculiarly adapted to our own Government."

Senator Wagner, before the Senate Finance Committee, estimated it would cost $1,680,000,000 per year

Roosevelt Note Limits Powers Of Labor Body

Board Authority in Cases Such as Newspaperman's Is Questioned.

By Felix Belair.

Personally entering the dispute over the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board in the case involving discharge of Dean S. Jennings, an employe of the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, President Roosevelt yesterday asked the board to refrain from considering such controversies.

While the President's letter did not specifically refer to the Call-Bulletin case, it was clearly prompted by that controversy, as it is the only important dispute of the kind that has come before the board.

The letter led to immediate repercussions. Francis Biddle, chairman of the board, which previously had ordered reinstatement of the discharged employe, declared that the President's request would not alter the decision reached by the board. Board members were plainly startled by the President's action and there was talk of resignations.

Statement of Broun.

Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild, last night issued a statement in New York in which, the Associated Press reports, he declared the President had "surrendered" to the publishers "at the point of a wooden gun."

"We feel," his statement said, "that it is impossible to dodge the fact that the newspaper publishers have cracked down on the President of the United States and that Franklin D. Roosevelt has cracked up." The Executive's letter, Broun said, "means that the Jennings case becomes no more than a pressed flower for our memory book. And we will remember."

At NRA a high official expressed the opinion that the board had no jurisdiction in the case and indicated that it would be handled without reference to the labor relations board.

Representatives of newspaper publishers greeted the President's

Parley Called By Roosevelt On NRA's Fate

Richberg, Williams, Miss Perkins Summoned to Night Session.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

With strong indications that President Roosevelt favors continuance of the NRA on a modified but more-or-less permanent basis, a night conference was called at the White House last night to debate the fate of the Blue Eagle.

This problem—the future of NRA, its codes and vast administrative set-up—remains the largest single question still unsettled by the President, now that his public works and social security program have been launched in Congress.

Three alternatives have been proposed by the National Industrial Recovery Board, and presumably they were discussed at the meeting. The NIRB has been able to agree on only one point, namely, that it is up to the President to decide.

Williams at Conference.

To help him make up his mind, Mr. Roosevelt called in Secretary of Labor Perkins, Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coordinator; Edwin L. Davis, Federal Trade Commission chairman; Charles Fahy, of the Petroleum Administration; Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, and four of the NRA high command.

These were S. Clay Williams, chairman of the NIRB; Leon Marshall and Sidney Hillman, members, and Blackwell Smith, acting chief counsel. The three other members of the recovery board, Walton H. Hamilton, Leon Henderson and A. D. Whiteside, were absent.

Adheres to Essentials.

Word was passed out at the White House that the conference was only preliminary, but Mr. Roosevelt is believed to be nearing a final decision on the vital question of NRA renewal. The recovery act under which the Administration entered "partnership" with business expires on June 16.

The three proposals of the NIRA have been disclosed roughly to be (1) temporary continuance of NRA,

Jennings Given Life by Jury Deliberating Only 50 Minutes

Raymond McKinley Jennings, 33, was sentenced to life imprisonment today after conviction by a corporation court in Alexandria of the murder Christmas Eve of his 27-year-old estranged wife, Virginia.

Jennings pleaded guilty but it took the jury only 50 minutes to return its verdict with a recommendation for leniency which was followed by Judge William P. Wools in passing sentence.

Twice during the trial which lasted only a few hours Jennings collapsed. He fainted before arraignment and court was recessed for 20 minutes while restoratives were applied. Later as he left the witness stand he collapsed again, necessitating a second recess.

Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan in his argument to the jury asked for a first-degree verdict, pointing out that evidence showed that the crime had been deliberately planned.

Defense attorneys argued that the plea of guilty of murder was a technical one. They stressed that the defendant did not deny the slaying but did deny malicious intent.

Jennings told a long story of drinking on Christmas Eve and of his marital difficulties. He admitted he had gone on the fatal night to the George Mason Hotel where his wife worked and in front of which the shooting occurred.

The defendant said he remembered seeing his wife and child there that night and of kissing the child and of asking his wife if she was planning to remarry. When she told him she wanted nothing else to do with him, he said, "everything went black before me and I don't remember what occurred."

The State, through witnesses, established that Jennings had waited outside the hotel for his wife, suspecting her of attending a party there after working hours.

George Richard Fletcher, of Alexandria, who witnessed the shooting and captured Jennings, testified he heard a woman say, "Don't take the gun out here," and that Jennings immediately began firing.

Mais and Legenza Die Feb. 2; Weiss' Body Found in Creek

Slayers in Death House After Resentence by Richmond Court.

By William Christian.
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22.—Groggy after constant grilling and a hurried trip from New York, Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, the notorious tri-State gang killers, were stowed safely away tonight in the death house at the Virginia State Penitentiary, counting off the brief days until February 2 when they die in the electric chair.

Gates of the outside world finally closed on them after Judge John L. Ingram, in Hustings Court, had ordered that they pay society—11 days from today—with their lives for the many crimes they have committed.

The only company they will have from now on will be two other condemned murderers, Philip Jones, colored, who killed two little Clifton Forge girls, and Noah Newton, of Fredericksburg, who slew his former sweetheart for "meddling" in his affairs.

Taken to Court.

Mais and Legenza were taken separately to court a few hours after they had been brought in on a special car from New York guarded by 11 Government agents with machine guns and automatic rifles.

Escorted by six carloads of Richmond police Mais appeared first. Already in prison garb, he was a sorry sight. With red eyes, scars on his neck and a three-day growth of beard he faced Judge Ingram.

"Robert Mais," Judge Ingram said, "on the 22d day of August you were sentenced to be executed on November 1. You escaped from the city jail on September 29, and remained a fugitive. It is necessary, therefore, that a new date be named.

"I have set the second day of February, 1935, for the execution of the order of August 22."

Receives Legal Order.

Mais, his hands held tightly together, tried to put the formal legal order in his pocket. Capt. A. S. Wright, local detective chief, who was holding him, tucked the paper into the side pocket of the prisoners' olive convict coat.

"May I see my attorney?" came a scarcely audible request in the high voice of the gunman.

"Yes, the law permits you to see your attorney," the Judge replied.

"Yes, sir," said Mais, and bowed his head as photographers started taking pictures. The two sentences were the only ones he uttered. After Maj. Rice M. Youell, of the State penitentiary, signed necessary papers, Maj. R. B. Jordan, chief of local police, headed an escort of two dozen detectives which took the gunman back to the death cell.

Thirty minutes after Mais had left the courtroom, Legenza, his legs broken from a fall while being chased by Philadelphia police, was brought from his cell in a patrol wagon. Officers carried his stretcher to the judge's bench and Bullet-Marked, Weighted Corpse Identified by Martin Farrell.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22 (AP).—In an iron-weighted bundle, dragged up from the muddy bottom of Neshaminy Creek, authorities today found the end of a three-month hunt—the bullet-marked body of William Weiss, reputed kidnap victim of the notorious "Tri-State Gang."

Wrapped in blankets bound with wire, the body of the night-life character, "snatched" from outside his suburban home last October, was brought up with grappling ropes from the shallow stream just northeast of Philadelphia.

An hour later, Martin Farrell, member of the gang blamed for the killing, hesitantly identified the mud-covered corpse as that of the reputedly wealthy suburbanite, whose abduction baffled authorities for more than two months before they trailed the Robert Mais mob to earth.

"That's Bill Weiss."

"That's—that's Bill Weiss," he muttered, when Police Superintendent Joseph A. Lestrange questioned him, standing on the small iron bridge under which the body was discovered after two days of grappling in snow, rain, fog and floating ice cakes.

Finding of the body, and the capture last week in New York of the convicted killers, Mais and Walter Legenza, and the remnant of their "Tri-State band" winds up the activities of the gang through the Philadelphia area.

Farrell and the other two taken in New York—Marie McKeever, "girl friend" of Mais, and Edwin (Bones) Gale, fugitive from a Georgia chain gang—were brought to Philadelphia yesterday. Charges in connection with the Weiss slaying and with the band's activities probably will be brought against them.

Other Charges.

Chalked against the gang in addition to the Weiss abduction and slaying, are two pay roll robberies in Philadelphia and reputed plots to kidnap several other persons.

Weiss' abduction was the most puzzling Federal and State authorities faced in taking up the hunt for the mobsmen.

Three men "snatched" the night life figure as he drove up to his home the evening of October 28. Not until 24 days later—November 20—however, did word of the kidnaping leak out.

Investigation revealed the payment of $8,000 of a $100,000 ransom demanded in a futile effort to gain his return. This was done on November 6, the last time the gang contacted the Weiss family and the day the victim was believed to have been taken from the gang's hideout, driven to Neshaminy Creek, shot and dumped into the stream.

Although Federal and local operatives believed early in the hunt that Mais and his gunmen might have been involved in the case, it was not until about mid-Decem-

Boys in Joyride Trial Denied 'Full Hearing,' Prettyman Says

'Not Criticizing' Judge Bentley, D. C. Counsel Tells Senate Committee; Jurist Weighs Request for a Retrial.

The Senate District Committee was told yesterday by the city's chief law officer that Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, did not grant a "full hearing" to the two 15-year-old boys she committed to the National Training School for Boys last week.

Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, the witness, had appeared before the committee on another matter when the talk turned to the case of Miss Bentley and the boys.

"I am not criticizing Judge Bentley," Prettyman told the Senators, "but I don't think she granted the boys a full hearing."

By implication, Prettyman said the same thing earlier in the day when he appeared before Judge Bentley. A request had been made by Attorney Ralph A. Cusick that the trial of the boys be reopened. Prettyman said he had no objection to a new trial.

Judge Bentley, who committed the boys—William Fanning and Arthur Penn—for "joyriding" to Roanoke in another's car, declined to act on the request yesterday. She said she would ponder the request and announce her decision later.

Other developments in the already celebrated case were:

Inquiry at the National Training School for Boys developed that 60 per cent of the inmates "make good" after leaving the institution—at least up to the age of 21. The remaining 40 per cent either violate the law again or "get into difficulties."

Boys at the school—officials don't like to have it called a "reformatory"—expressed indignation over news stories about the place, especially those inferring that they were potential Dillingers.

The speedy trial which preceded the commitment of the Fanning and Penn boys last Friday has been

State Will Rest Today After Introducing Ladder Evidence.

Witnesses Place Bruno Near Scene

Riley Recalls Sisk to Question Him on Plaster Cast.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a silent figure in gray, prowled the muddy lanes that curl through the Sourland Mountains for a fortnight before the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped, two more witnesses swore today.

It was the third time that a witness has climbed the two steps to the rickety witness chair to testify that Hauptmann, like a bandit preparing a surprise attack, reconnoitered the scene of the Nation's most notorious crime.

Down out of the Sourlands today, his face scrubbed shining clean and a new white silk scarf around his neck, came Millard Whited to tell in a Jersey drawl that he saw Hauptmann twice in February, 1932, on the road to the Lindbergh home. The kidnaping occurred March 1, 1932.

Witness Bewildered.

It was a bad day in court for the woodsman. Before he got through Hauptmann's lawyers tore gaping holes in his testimony, laughed at him in open court and sent him back into the hills, a simple man bewildered by the strange patterns into which the English language can be twisted.

Charles Rossiter fared better. He left the witness chair unshaken in his story that he saw Hauptmann [illegible] near the Princeton airport on a Saturday before the kidnaping, two wheels of his automobile in a ditch at the side of the road.

These two men, one a dweller in crowded places and the other the kind of person who knows all the neighbors for miles around, agreed on one point with Amandus Hockmuth. It was Hockmuth, 86 years old and a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, who testified earlier in the trial that at noon on the day of the kidnaping Hauptmann drove through Hopewell in a green sedan with a ladder in the back seat.

All three of them say the man they saw was dressed in gray. That down over his eyes came the brim of a gray felt hat. Even this man's face was gray, they say, and Hockmuth thought he "looked like a man who had seen a ghost."

Meanwhile the prosecution is preparing to rest tomorrow, and, if it does, Hauptmann probably will take the stand Thursday as first witness for the defense.

Didn't Know Everyone.

What got Millard Whited in trouble today was that last October he went to New York City to testify at a hearing when the State of New Jersey was trying to extradite Hauptmann out of New York so he could be tried for murder instead of simple extortion. A transcript of the testimony he gave on that occasion was on the defense lawyers' table today, and all during the cross-examination they flung his own words back, bellowed at him, and left him limp and confused.

This job was entrusted to Lloyd Fisher, a brisk young Flemington attorney who knows the weakness in the armor of all folk in Hunterdon County. He went at it this way:

"Now, Mr. Whited, you testified at the Bronx hearing that the reason you remember the defendant is because you knew everybody in the Sourland Mountain region. Did you know Ollie Whately, who was Col. Lindbergh's butler before he died?"

"No, I didn't," Whited replied.

"You never saw him, did you?"

"No."

"Then you wish to change your testimony, don't you?"

"Yes, I do."

"Your memory is very good, isn't it—it must be if you can remember a man's face after two years?"

"Yes, its good."

"Whom did you sell your farm to in the latter part of 1932?"

"I don't remember the man's name."

Then Fisher began to laugh at

Bar to Assist House Sifting Of D.C. Crime

Unrestricted Authority to Subpena Witness Is Committee's Aim.

Full resources and information of the District Bar Association are to be employed by the House District Crime Investigating Committee, Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, committee chairman, said yesterday.

Formal hearings are to be begun by the committee next Monday morning, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is to be the first witness. He is to be followed by executives of the Police Department.

The committee is to be clothed with all the power of the House under a resolution introduced yesterday by Representative Randolph. Specific authority for the inquiry is to be sought to forestall any person whom the committee wishes to examine successfully challenging its authority, Representative Randolph said.

Speed Promised.

Prompt action on the resolution has been promised by Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee, and Speaker Joseph W. Byrns has given his general approval of the inquiry, saying the committee should have unquestioned authority.

"The committee," Representative Randolph said, "already has received proffers of aid from several members of the District bar.

"Unquestionably the criminal lawyers of the District are familiar with conditions and know many things which they are not privileged to divulge. Out of their experience and their knowledge the committee undoubtedly will get information of prime importance.

"It is the purpose of the committee to call on the members of the bar to aid it to improve conditions."

Article Bares Cabinet Fight Over Pearson

Interior Unit's Reprint Attacks Cummings and Farley.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Distribution by the Interior Department to the press of an article in the current Nation sharply attacking Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and Postmaster General James A. Farley for the appointment of a judge in the Virgin Islands yesterday brought into the open an intra-Administration fight over Gov. Paul M. Pearson of that insular possession.

The Interior Department release, later hastily withdrawn, caused surprise, since it put the publicity bureau of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes in the position of giving authoritative circulation, if not indorsement, to an attack on two other Cabinet members.

Secretary Ickes is known to be a stanch defender of Gov. Pearson, while Postmaster General Farley in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic national committee is understood to be anxious for the removal of the Virgin Islands governor, first appointed by former President Herbert Hoover in 1931. Were it not for Secretary Ickes' support, it is believed, Gov. Pearson would have been retired many months ago.

Islands Protest.

Simultaneously with the appearance of the reprint of the Nation article, defending Gov. Pearson, under the imprimatur of the Interior Department, there arrived in Washington copies of a mass protest of the Virgin Islanders, addressed to Congress, against the administration of Gov. Pearson.

The protest contained a petition purported to have been signed by 4,000 citizens of St. Thomas, asking a congressional investigation of affairs in the islands and removal of Gov. Pearson. Among the charges made against Gov. Pearson were press censorship, intimidation of the natives by show of armed force, severe taxation and denial of the rights of collective bargaining.

Snow or Sleet on Way Here; Cold, Fog, Floods Ravage U.S.

Chilling rain, which made Washington shiver as it doused the streets all day yesterday, will turn to snow or sleet today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

The temperature, which yesterday reached a minimum of 31 at 6 p. m., will not rise above 32 throughout the day, the Bureau said. Late yesterday occasional flurries of sleet accompanied the rain. Taxicabs did thriving business when offices closed for the day.

Meanwhile deaths and damage mounted throughout the Nation as the cold wave stretched its icy fingers in all directions. Fogs, floods, sleet, rain, snow, cold, landslides and gales were reported by the Associated Press as the human toll of winter's latest rampage passed 65.

A girdle of freezing weather stretched across the deep south from Florida to California. In Texas thousands of cattle froze to death, while others died of exposure in northern Louisiana. Nipping cold, snapping through the Rio Grande district, injured vegetable crops, and the mercury at Brownsville, Tex., one of the most southern cities in the United States, sank to 26.

Throughout Maryland snow fell generally yesterday. A heavy blanket carpeted the Western section, and flurries swept Baltimore and the Eastern Shore.

The Weather Bureau said conditions were right for the deepest snow of the season. Cumberland reported the flakes had reached a depth of 6 inches by mid-afternoon.

Eight to 10 inches of snow fell in some Arkansas and Louisiana areas, and a storm in New Orleans gave many youngsters their first chance to throw snowballs in the modern city and in the old French Quarter. Pensacola, Fla., was visited by a light snow.

Swollen streams menaced many portions of Dixie. Washed-out bridges and ice sheathed roads, according to the Associated Press, made travel impossible or dangerous in the Memphis sector, where

4 Million Rise Urged for War On Smugglers

House Committee Admits Repeal Didn't Have Expected Effect.

(Associated Press.)

In reporting the $660,025,568 Treasury-Postoffice supply bill yesterday, the House Appropriations Committee frankly conceded that it had misjudged the effect prohibition repeal would have on liquor smuggling.

As a result, the committee allowed the Coast Guard $4,000,000 more than was carried in the measure last year.

"The appropriations for the Coast Guard were drastically reduced at the last session," the committee reported, "in the belief that the anti-smuggling work of the organization would be very greatly diminished with the repeal of prohibition. This situation has failed to materialize as fully as expected.

$50,000,000 Loss.

"There is considerable activity particularly in the smuggling of 190-proof alcohol and Coast Guard officials estimate the loss of revenue in customs and internal revenue taxes due to these smuggling operations at between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 annually."

The parliamentary jam over the work relief bill delayed debate on the measure yesterday and caused a temporary set-back to Administration plans to rush the regular appropriation bills through without delay.

In addition to the regular departmental allowances, the combination bill carries $1,529,804,580 in permanent and indefinite appropriations, $120,974,856 more than the 1935 estimate.

Figuring prominently in the increase in these annually recurring funds was a set-up of $63,878,000 in the amount for debt retirement, to $630,419,000, and $40,000,000 more for interest on the public debt, to $875,000,000.

Though carried in the Treasury-Postoffice measure the $1,529,804,580 is already authorized and its application on the debts is automatic.

More Funds to Bureau.

Additional funds also were granted for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, including the alcoholic tax unit that collects liquor taxes, with a view to increasing collections another $50,000,000 or so.

The controversial appropriations in the Postoffice bill for ocean and foreign air mail were not altered. The committee explained it would wait until the future policy was determined as a result of Postoffice investigation of contracts now under way. Domestic air mail was given $10,700,000, compared with present costs of only $9,500,000, to permit expansion of the service.

The regular supply bill was $194,884,642 under 1935 appropriations and $1,394,455 less than the Budget Bureau asked. One item of $187,450,000, representing special allowances for land bank financing and silver purchase funds in the 1934 measure, accounted for most of the reduction.

Boris Assumes Bulgaria's Rule

Premier Resigns, King Takes Power Into His Own Hands.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 22 (AP).—Premier Kimon Gueorgieff, Bulgaria's dictator for less than nine months, resigned today as King Boris moved suddenly and swiftly to take the reins of power into his own hands.

In what foreign observers described as an "energetic gesture" to regain control of the regime, Boris accepted the resignations of the entire Gueorgieff cabinet.

A section of the Bulgarian army emerged at the top of Bulgaria's political whirlpool as the King appointed Gen. Petko Zlatoff, minister of war, premier. Zlatoff placed three army officers in his hastily formed cabinet.

A court official, seeking to explain Gueorgieff's sudden capitulation to the opposition to his dictatorship, said King Boris submitted quietly to the coup d'etat which swept Gueorgieff into power. Today he accepted the premier's resignation in short order and had his successor sworn in.

Zlatoff completed formation of his cabinet in less than three hours. The three army officers held strategic positions in it.

Reports from abroad said the King had struck at a secret group which sought to undermine the monarchy and that an army officer who was a leader of the plot in this section, had been arrested. There was no confirmation of this report at the palace.

The new premier promised a vigorous effort to consolidate the nation behind his regime.

Red Cross Head Suffers Relapse

John B. Payne Gravely Ill, Bulletin Announces.

The condition of John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, who underwent an operation for appendicitis in George Washington University Hospital last week, was described last night as "very grave."

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Judge Payne's physician, issued a bulletin in which he said that complications had set in late in the day, and sources close to the patient said his recovery was problematical.

Judge Payne, a former member of the Illinois Superior Court bench, was appointed Red Cross chairman by President Harding in 1921. He is to pass his seventy-ninth birthday this month.

Between You and Me

The House-Senate Rivalry and Economic Security; Rebellion in the Caucus.

—By Raymond Clapper

The old rivalry between the House and the Senate, which is as instinctive as that between cats and dogs, is speeding up consideration of economic security legislation.

The Senate Finance Committee planned hearings to open yesterday, but no sooner had word of it got around town than the House Ways and Means Committee called a meeting for Monday, thus winning the toss for kickoff. The first House witness was Edwin E. Witte, executive secretary of the President's Committee on Social Security. Yesterday, while Senator Wagner was explaining the bill to the Senate Finance Committee, the House Committee had as its star performer Miss Perkins of the Cabinet. That leaves the House Committee up one on the Senate Committee.

Members of the almighty Ways and Means Committee sit flanking elderly Chairman Doughton. On his left is the essence of New England conservative Republicanism, the veteran Treadway of Massachusetts. Democratic landslides have no terror for him. He first came to Congress in 1912, riding in despite the fact that Wilson carried his State. Likewise he came through in 1932 and again last year. There are only a few of them left, and Treadway is the most unrelenting New Deal foe of all.

On Doughton's left sits the young, broad-shouldered Sam Hill, from the opposite end of the country—Washington State—a coming Democrat that the House has its eye on. He is due to step into the powerful chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee after Doughton. That is the reason he declined an almost sure chance to go into the Senate. Last summer friends offered to clear the way for him when Clarence Dill refused to run for re-election. The new Washington Senator, Schwellerbach, refused to enter the race until Hill indicated he was not interested. If all goes well with Hill and the Democrats, he stands a reasonably good chance of going up the ladder through the chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee, then to the majority leadership and then to be Speaker.

The House Ways and Means Committee room is in the new House Office Building, and is a magnificent chamber fit for a throne room. The committee members sit on a semicircular dais with golden tapestry draping down behind them. Green leather chairs, some 500, are provided for spectators. Comfortable retiring rooms and luxurious appointments, not to mention the great power which goes with the committee, make membership on it the most sought after in the House.

The Democratic House caucus yesterday on the works bill was theoretically secret, but soundproofing around the House chamber was too weak to smother the angry shouting, the heavy gavel rapping, the thundering of Speaker Joe Byrns and other noises attending the rebellion which attended the attempt to gag the House Democrats.

The purpose of the caucus, which was forced on the House majority without warning, was to permit the members to let off steam in closed session before the $4,800,000,000 works bill came up for action in the House. It turned into a rebellion. You can squeeze a rubber stamp too hard. The young rebels revived the right of amendment. Leaders had planned to permit no amendments to be offered unless recommended by the Appropriations Committee. Now members of the House are graciously allowed to offer amendments to certain sections of the bill.

The $4,800,000,000 works appropriation will be the largest single money measure since the war and it is also one of the shortest major appropriation bills that has come out of the House Appropriations committee. This one covers less than seven pages, and is barely a thousand words long, including all legal verbiage. The social security bill, for instance, covers 63 pages. The average regular appropriation bill will run more than 100 pages.

The works bill, officially a joint resolution which after passage will bear the title "Emergency Relief Act of 1935," merely sets forth that there is to be appropriated for use in the discretion of the President $4,000,000,000 plus unexpended balances of several emergency agencies totaling $800,000,000. All of the money is to remain available until June 30, 1937. If we haven't got re-employment by that time, they're going to turn the whole thing back to the Indians.

The only specification is that the money is to be spent in a way that will promote the general welfare, provide relief from hardships attributable to unemployment, relieve economic maladjustments, alleviate distress and improve living and working conditions and that it is to be used to include but is not limited to slum clearance, rural housing, rural electrification, reforestation, soil erosion, blighted area and submarginal land reclamation, improvement of existing road systems and construction of national highways, grade crossing elimination, Civilian Conservation Corps work, and other useful Federal or non-Federal work. Anything goes.

• • • •

There is alarm over Section 4, which permits the President to select any person or agency to administer the huge fund. Section 5, which permits him to buy any real or personal property under the power of eminent domain, and Section 6, which permits the President to prescribe rules and regulations necessary to carry out the act and to impose a maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine for violation.

That last provision, it is alleged, would permit the President to throw a man in jail for almost anything.

The ultimate in congressional pork is proposed in a bill introduced by Representative T. L. Moritz, Pennsylvania Democrat and until recently secretary to Mayor McNair, of Pittsburgh. He proposes that each Representative be provided with $1,000,000 to be spent in his own congressional district to build low-priced homes. The bill provides "that each Congressman shall personally supervise and direct the expenditure of such moneys in his district." He doesn't let the Senators in on this.

Though he never had the good fortune to gaze upon Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Carlyle wrote eloquently of the philosophy of clothes. The humble citizen in the Senate gallery, who looks down upon the gala spectacle of Senator Lewis, never ceases to wonder (at least here's one who hasn't) upon the philosophy which guides the hand that arranges those eye-soothing ensembles which provide such harmonious setting for the famous whiskers.

The Senator is the walking demonstration of the theory Carlyle expounded in "Sartor Resartus" that "neither in tailoring nor in legislating does man proceed by mere accident." Dress is a form of architecture. Man's body and his clothing, Carlyle says, are the site and the materials out of which his "beautified edifice, of a person, is to be built." On that basis Senator Lewis becomes not a mere edifice, but a whole PWA project.

You can picture the Senator at the close of a busy day, though a gallant one, for he has never been indifferent to the flutter of a dainty handkerchief in the gallery, sighing and at last wearily tossing off a nightcap. He also sleeps in one.

The Senator's nightcap, if you are interested in the details—and nothing concerning Senator Lewis is insignificant—is not merely a plain utilitarian accessory to keep out the night drafts. Designed with the true J. Ham Lewis flair, it is quite decorative—at least that's the report an astonished visitor brings back.

Virginia Hunting Hitch-Hiker for Autoist Holdup

McDaniels, bound for Huntington, W. Va., spied the hitch-hiker near the Cumberland Valley station as he passed through the city last night. He responded to the man's signal for a ride.

Three miles east of Romney, W. Va., officers were informed, the passenger pointed a gun at McDaniels and demanded that he hand over his money and watch.

The man was described as about 26 years old and weighing 175 pounds.

Oil Bill to Plug Court Rule Gap Wins in Senate

Amended 'Hot' Petroleum Measure to Replace 9(c) Goes to House.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday passed by a rapid, voice vote a new "hot oil" bill, intended to stop interstate shipments of illegally-produced petroleum to plug the gap made by the Supreme Court ruling holding section 9(c) of the national recovery act unconstitutional.

Bearing two amendments, the measure now goes to the House where several similar bills have been introduced. There is prospect of still another measure, calling for outright Federal control of crude-oil production.

The new measure, drawn up by Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, author of section 9(c), specifically prohibits interstate shipments of what is termed "contraband oil" and was drafted to comply with the Supreme Court's contention that a policy of Congress must be set forth before that body can delegate authority to the President to enforce such regulations as he or his agents may promulgate.

The two amendments, offered by Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, at the request of the Attorney General, confer on the President or the Attorney General the right to apply to a Federal district court for enforcement of the act where formerly that power was given the President "or his duly authorized agent or agency." That agency has been Oil Administrator Ickes and his petroleum boards.

The President or his agent still has the right, however, to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be found necessary to carry out provisions of the act and fines and imprisonment may be imposed for violations.

The Connally bill was warmly indorsed last night by Representative Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, who said he was confident the House would approve it.

A sub-committee, headed by Representative Cole (Democrat), Maryland, was appointed yesterday by Rayburn to investigate the entire oil situation.

Capt. Robinson, Eastern District Police, said Michael Beal, 54, of Mount Savage, and Edward Makowski, 21, had confessed to the abduction along with eight holdups and seven larcenies.

Beal and Makowski were captured yesterday in a parked car. Police said the pair tried to draw their guns, but were overpowered by Sergt. Carl Walter.

Police also were holding another man for questioning in connection with recent robberies and were hunting for a fourth. The three were arraigned in the police line-up today to be viewed by 50 recent holdup victims.

Deputy Sheriff Maynard was seized January 4 by two men as he stopped near Jessup to investigate a wrecked car. He said the men covered him with a gun, took him on a ride around the section in his own automobile and then dumped him out in northeast Baltimore. Maynard was not armed.

Suit to Bring Test Of Commitments To State Asylums

Richmond, Jan. 22 (AP). — The legality of commitments under which nearly 600 persons are confined in Virginia institutions for the insane, feeble-minded and inebriate is brought in issue by an application for a writ of mandamus filed in the State Supreme Court of Appeals today by Attorney General A. P. Staples.

The court is asked to pass upon the eligibility of trial justices and of justices of the peace to act as members of lunacy commissions under the trial justice act passed by the last General Assembly.

If the justices of the peace are held ineligible to serve, commitments of 330 men and 115 women sent to State institutions since July 1, 1934, on orders signed by them would appear to be illegal and release and recommitment of these individuals might be necessary.

On the other hand, a decision that trial justices are ineligible would affect similarly the cases of 109 men and 39 women committed on their orders.

If the court should hold that neither of these classes of officials now is qualified to serve, a total of 593 asylum inmates would be subject to release.

Court Approves $5,000 To Settle Trust Liability

Frederick, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Judge Arthur D. Willard signed an order in the circuit court empowering John J. The action was taken by the court on a petition of Mr. Ghingher, which set forth that the New York corporation has no assets in this State and that any proceedings to enforce the liability act would have to be instituted elsewhere.

Senate Inquiry Airs Monopoly In Shipbuilding

3 Big Companies Set Up Central Firm During War, Witness Says.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate Munitions Committee yesterday went ahead with its investigation, inquiring, while shipbuilding company officials were on the stand, into war-time cost-plus contracts.

Under these the United States paid all expenses of a contract and a certain per cent more.

Stephen Raushenbush, committee investigator, said the one cost-plus plan included an arrangement whereby the Government agreed to pay one-half of all overhead items. He added that shipbuilding companies tried to make the Government pay on such items as "dividends," "expenses for parties" and "income taxes."

N. R. Parker, treasurer of the New York Shipbuilding Co., said his company honestly believed such items were included as part of the contract.

Clark Scores Attitude.

"You were going to get your pound of flesh," Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, commented.

"We considered inclusions of these items as part of the contract," the witness replied.

Raushenbush said such sharing of overhead brought the New York Co. about $3,000,000 "velvet" under its war-time contracts.

John Metten, president of the company, testified that three concerns, including his own, had a virtual monopoly on the shipbuilding business outside of the naval yards, and considered Government-operated yards virtual competitors.

He said the three major companies, the New York Shipbuilding Company, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company and the Newport News Company, had set up a central agency known as the Marine Engineering Company which designed ships for all and for the Navy Department. He said the Navy would have much difficulty designing and building its own ships for lack of trained personnel.

At 'Mercy' of Firms, Says Clark.

Senator Clark said it appeared to him the Navy was "at the mercy" of this company and its three allied organizations.

The House Military Affairs Committee meanwhile, postponed hearings on a bill to prevent profiteering in war time because several witnesses, among them Bernard Baruch and Hugh S. Johnson, failed to appear.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), S. C., said that a spokesman for the American Legion would appear today.

The committee had invited, in addition to Baruch and Johnson, Secretary Dern, Secretary Swanson and General Douglas MacArthur. All sent explanations for their failure to appear.

Johnson and Baruch, who, with MacArthur, make up a committee designated by the President to find a way to remove profits from war, thought they could be on hand Thursday, McSwain said.

Father of Six Is Arrested in Harpers Ferry Shooting.

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Albert Ainsworth, 35, and the father of six children, who went on a rampage at his home near here Sunday night, shooting dangerously close to the Pentecostal Church across the road from his home, was arrested by County Policeman Merle E. Alger, of Charles Town, last night.

The officer placed the man under arrest at his home while he was in bed. Ainsworth offered no resistance. It was alleged that the man had been drinking heavily before the shooting occurred.

The Rev. B. F. Crawford, who has charge of the church, said Ainsworth fired about 20 shots from a shotgun, spraying the church with shot. The shot fell so close to the front door of the church that the 80 worshipers, including 20 children, were forced to crawl on their hands and knees to escape injury.

Ainsworth, when questioned by Officer Alger, said: "The shells were lying in the window since hunting season and the gun was sitting in the corner, so I just wanted to use the shells."

Congress Pushes Hearings on Social Plan

Underwood & Underwood.

As members of the Senate Finance Committee yesterday began hearings on the proposed economic security bill. Left to right are Senators W. H. King, of Utah; Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman, and James Couzens, of Michigan.

'Security' Plan Faces Redraft In Both Houses

New Deal Leaders Give the 'Go Ahead' Sign for Changes.

to provide $40 pensions "for our 3,500,000 old people." The Administration draft proposes $50,000,000 the first year, and $125,000,000 immediately thereafter, for $15 maximum Federal advances toward State pensions of at least $30.

A $2,000,000,000 Fund.

Director Edwin E. Witte, of the President's economic security committee, estimated the unemployment insurance plan, with its 3 per cent Federal tax on pay rolls, would in effect give the Treasury a $2,000,000,000 fund it could use to stabilize industrial credit. He insisted Federal appropriations proposed in the old-age pension title would adequately care for the 1,000,000 "old" persons he said would be eligible.

Smartly dressed in a small hat and black ensemble, Mme. Perkins offered herself for cross-examination before the House Ways and Means Committee, after a preliminary statement, presented without notes.

She was slated to go before the Senate Finance Committee this morning, but that engagement was canceled when the House group invited her back.

As the "experts" who prepared the original draft could not agree on its terms, she laughingly conceded "Congress hardly could be expected to."

But an unspoken caution, "go slowly," could be heard between lines of her testimony.

"We have here a reasonably economical plan—one we can hope to carry out without too great an inroad on public purses," she said. "It covers major social and economic hazards, and provides a substantial basis of security for low income groups."

"Depression Peg."

Combined with a supplemental program of public works, which would be thrown in the breach when private business lags, she said the release of insurance funds when any great number are thrown out of work "should put a peg in this downward spiral of depression."

She told the committee a health insurance program will be submitted to Congress, but it will take experts "one or two months" to work out the details.

Across the Capitol, Senator Wagner was pressed by Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee, but parried questions on the scope of the bill by offering to join any reasonable effort to make Federal allowances more liberal.

Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, wanted to know how 3,500,000 dependent old people could be pensioned under the $125,000,000 annual appropriation proposed in the bill.

"If the Senator wants to propose something more liberal than this, I'll go along," said Wagner, adding, "I don't think it's just to criticize us for spending too much money, and at the same time say we're not spending enough."

Four Separate Bills Urged.

Echoing views expressed earlier by Senate Republican Leader McNary, Senator Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, suggested the bill be divided into four separate measures.

Wagner offered figures showing that as of 1929, 6,000,000 families in the United States averaged less than $1,000 annual income; 16,000,000 families, $2,000, and 20,000,000 families less than $2,500, while "the 36,000 families at the top of the economic ladder received as much as the 11,553,000 families at the bottom."

"It is impossible to calculate the precise sums required for this task," said Wagner. "Opinions will vary greatly as to what constitute fair standards of health and decency, but if we accept $40 per month per person as an immediate minimum goal, our 3,500,000 dependent old people need assistance to the extent of $1,680,000,000 per year. And this need will mount with alarming rapidity."

Boy Roller Skater in Tears

Four Friends, Lad Says, Started With Him From Pittsburgh, But the Others Disappeared on Trek to Ohio.

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Norman Stonehouse, 12-year-old long-distance roller-skater from Pittsburgh, has disappeared again as arrangements were being made to return him to his home. Stonehouse was turned over to the Traveler's Aid Society after he had asked for direction for Hagerstown at the home of Mrs. William A. Triplett at Halbrook, near here.

He went to the society's dressing room today, climbed out of a window, two and a half stories from the ground, dropped to a roof beneath and disappeared. The boy broke down in tears when he was told by Mrs. Triplett that he was between 75 and 100 miles from Hagerstown. The woman became interested and asked him why he was crying.

He said that he and four other boys started out last Wednesday from Pittsburgh "for Ohio on roller skates." The five had met at their clubhouse and planned their journey, he said.

The quintet, he related, packed their extra clothing in one bundle and rolled merrily out of the Pennsylvania city. He said they got "hops" with passing vehicles. But last night the others ditched him, he asserted, because he was the smallest of the group. He had only $2 in his pocket and a flashlight.

"It was a good thing I had just put on some clean clothes," said Norman, "because all my things were in the bundle the others took along with them." He said they "slept in barns along the way and got something to eat from stores we passed."

Prison Break Plotter Gets 21 Years to Life

San Francisco, Jan. 22 (AP).—Clyde Stevens, confessed engineer of last week's San Quentin Prison break, pleaded guilty here today to three counts of bank robbery and was sentenced to Folsom Prison for a term of from 21 years to life.

District Attorney Albert E. Bagshaw, who shot and killed Rudolph Straight, one of the four convicts who abducted four prison officials and two guards and brutally beat Warden James B. Holohan, said he would seek the death penalty on a kidnap conspiracy charge for Stevens and the three captured survivors—Joe Kristy, Alexander Mackay and Fred Landers.

Masked Men Tar And Feather Pair Seized From Jail

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Masked men forced their way into the Elkins City Jail early today, seized two prisoners—a man and a girl—and covered them with tar and feathers on the outskirts of town.

The couple, whose names were listed by police as Peter Rimo, 57, and Sylvia Tingler, 19, were ordered to leave town, but were returned to jail later, apparently having suffered no ill effects.

They were serving terms on charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Investigators said six men were in the group which took the prisoners. They used a crowbar to pry open the cell doors after finding no officer on duty.

Accidental Killing Nets Farmer Sheriff's Son

Elkton, Md., June 22 (AP).—An accidental killing in December has brought about the arrest here of 19-year-old George Logan, son of former Sheriff G. Clinton Logan, of Rising Sun, on a charge of unlawfully carrying a firearm.

Logan and Billy Kirk, 15 years old, were shooting at an old hat while ice skating when the weapon accidentally discharged, causing Kirk's death. Logan has been released on bail.

Rotary Forum Plans Taken Up

Seven Leaders of Virginia Club Hold Meeting in Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Seven group leaders of Virginia Rotary Clubs met here yesterday afternoon to discuss plans for the Rotary round table on international affairs, to be held at the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

The visitors were luncheon guests of the Rev. Paul D. Bowden, governor of the Fifty-sixth (Virginia) District of Rotary. Dr. Charles G. Maphis, director of the institute of affairs, outlined plans for the week's round table.

The 55 Rotary Clubs in Virginia are sponsors for the round table. The idea originated with the Staunton club, following an address by Dr. Maphis. John D. Crowle, jr., became interested and has done valuable work in selling the plan to the Virginia Clubs.

The Rotary round table at the institute has received the unanimous indorsement of all past district governors of the Virginia clubs.

Gov. Bowden has named a committee of three to act with Dr. Maphis in an executive capacity for the project. Gov. Bowden is chairman and the other members are John D. Crowle, jr., of Staunton, and Lamar H. Timmons, president of the Charlottesville Rotary Club.

Group leaders attending the conference here included Curtis P. Bowman, Staunton; Dr. Horace Longaker, Newport News; William McC. Paxton, Norfolk; Joseph Harrison, Richmond; the Rev. Herbert Donovan, Fairfax; Charles Coffman, Winchester, and Irvin Cubine, Martinsville.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Pushed by a mule against a nail, Charles Starliper, Mercersburg, Route 3, suffered a severe injury when the nail penetrated his left temple. His condition is grave, physicians report.

Starliper had gone to the barn to fasten the mule. His physicians contemplate transferring him to a Baltimore institution for further treatment.

35 Indictments May Be Result Of Liquor Quiz

Franklin Jurors Drafting Bills After Moonshining Investigation.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Federal grand jurors who have been inquiring into alleged moonshine whisky conditions in Franklin County since October spent today in drawing up indictments.

There were reports that a number of indictments were drawn and approved, but there was no mention as to names. Federal agents who have worked on the case for 14 months expect at least 35 persons to be indicted.

Unless there is a late development, the grand jury has heard its last witness. The witnesses summoned here by the Government were dismissed today. They were told that the grand jury had asked for no additional information.

More than 200 witnesses have appeared before the grand jury and all of these signed waivers of immunity before entering the court room.

Court officials said several days will be required to draw up and pass upon the indictments. The grand jury may complete its duties in two days or it may require longer.

United States attorneys are busy reading over the 3,100 pages of testimony to gain information in drafting the presentments. The grand jury is said to be acting upon one count at a time and for this reason the completion of their report may require some days.

Franklin County residents allegedly involved are accused of transactions in liquor on which a Federal tax has not been paid. Another angle is that some of those indicted may also be charged with failure to make proper income tax returns.

Bank Reopens In Emmitsburg

Farmers' State Institution Takes Over Claims on Defunct Branch.

Emmitsburg, Md., Jan. 23 (AP).—Closed for more than two years, the Emmitsburg Savings Bank, one of the branches of the defunct Central Trust Co. of Maryland, was opened again today by the Farmers State Bank of Emmitsburg.

A large number of persons who held certificates calling for a dividend of 2 per cent from the Central Trust Co., provided by the People's Liquidating Corporation of Maryland, visited the old bank building.

Officials of the Farmers State Bank estimated that approximately $10,000 was paid in checks to depositors of the old Central Trust Co. and its local branch during the day.

The Farmers State Bank, which was an offspring of the old Annen Horner & Co., established in 1861, had practically outgrown its present quarters and, desiring more modern equipment, decided to take over the building of the Emmitsburg Savings Bank.

Officers of the Farmers State Bank are: President, M. F. Shuff, sr.; vice president, F. C. Riley; cashier, George L. Wilhide; assistant cashier, Reeves Blandford.

Japan Protests Reds' Activity In North Asia

Sinkiang New Danger Spot as Expansionist Aims Conflict.

Tokyo, Jan. 22 (AP).—A new danger spot appeared on the vast, trouble-splotched map of Asia today as Russia and Japan, two great powers equally confident of their destiny in the east, found their expansionist aims clashing in Sinkiang, huge northwestern territory nominally under Chinese rule.

With threatened conflict in Manchuria apparently staved off by virtual agreement for Russia's sale of the Chinese Eastern Railway, an official Japanese spokesman said he Soviet's alleged penetration of Sinkiang "menaces the peace and stability of eastern Asia."

The maintenance of that peace and stability, the spokesman asserted, is Japan's mission.

Earlier Koki Hirota, Japan's foreign minister, told the Diet that the westward movement of Chinese Communists, "coupled with the reported Sovietization of Sinkiang," obliges the Japanese government to "watch with concern activities of the Communist Party and its armies in China."

Charges "Fantastic."

Authoritative Russian quarters termed the charges of Soviet political penetration into Sinkiang fantastic, but admitted that Russia's economic influence there has increased since the completion of the Turkestan-Siberian Railway, which affords an outlet for Sinkiang's commerce.

Hirota's remarks in the Diet, they said, might bring an answer from Moscow concerning alleged Japanese imperialistic machinations in Sinkiang.

"Virtual completion" of the lengthy negotiations for Japanese-Manchukuoan purchase of the Chinese Eastern Railway, long center of controversy in Asia, was announced to the Diet by Hirota. He said:

"It is necessary that the Soviet negotiators refer one or two minor questions to Moscow. If the Soviet government's replies on the subject are satisfactory, the drafting of an agreement can be begun immediately.

Delays Expected.

"The drafting process is likely to produce fresh delays and difficulties and it may be several weeks before there is a formal signature."

Under the agreement, it is understood, Japan will pay Russia almost $40,000,000 for the Soviet's railway properties in the new Empire of Manchukuo, and assume responsibility for repatriation of the railroad's Russian employes.

The sinking issue erupted almost simultaneously with the announcement of the railway agreement. The foreign office spokesman, amplifying Hirota's Diet statement, asserted the territory of 550,000 square miles is rapidly falling under the domination of the Soviet, as has outer Mongolia.

Snow Due Here; Cold Sweeps East

air traffic came to a standstill, trains ran far behind schedule and monetary loss was great.

Pushing into the Eastern States and down the Atlantic Seaboard, the frigid blast brought rain and snow as it progressed. New Yorkers were advised of impending 20-degree weather.

In the West and Middle West some relief from the bitter weather was enjoyed, but forecasters warned of a new cold invasion, descending from the Northwest.

As gales lashed Juneau, Alaska, a hurricane struck Vera Cruz, Mex. The town was darkened and houses unroofed as the wind reached an 80-mile velocity.

While most of the country shivered, the Carolinas experienced unseasonable warmth. Yesterday was the warmest January 21 in Weather Bureau history in many places. The temperature at Charlotte was 66, and it reached 80 along the eastern coastal plain.

Paraguayans Drive On Bolivia Proper

Troops Reported Fleeing Town Near Border.

Asuncion, Jan. 22 (AP).—A report to the newspaper El Orden from its correspondent at Saltas today said Bolivian troops and civilians were evacuating the town of Charagua, in the Santa Cruz department of Bolivia.

Charagua is 30 miles west of Santa Fe, fortified place on the Parapti River, which Paraguayan troops captured January 18.

Evacuation of Charagua, if true, tends to confirm recent Paraguayan claims that their armies, victorious in recent campaigns in the Chaco, were ready to invade Bolivia proper.

Cotton Mill in Georgia To Be Sold for U. S. Tax

Atlanta, Jan. 22 (AP).—W. E. Page, Collector of Internal Revenue for Georgia, today said the Barrow County Cotton Mill, at Winder, Ga., would be sold next week at public auction for collection of the Government's processing tax on cotton. The mill closed shortly before Christmas. It normally employed between 200 and 250 workers.

The taxes due amount to $20,000, plus interest and penalties, Mr. Page said.

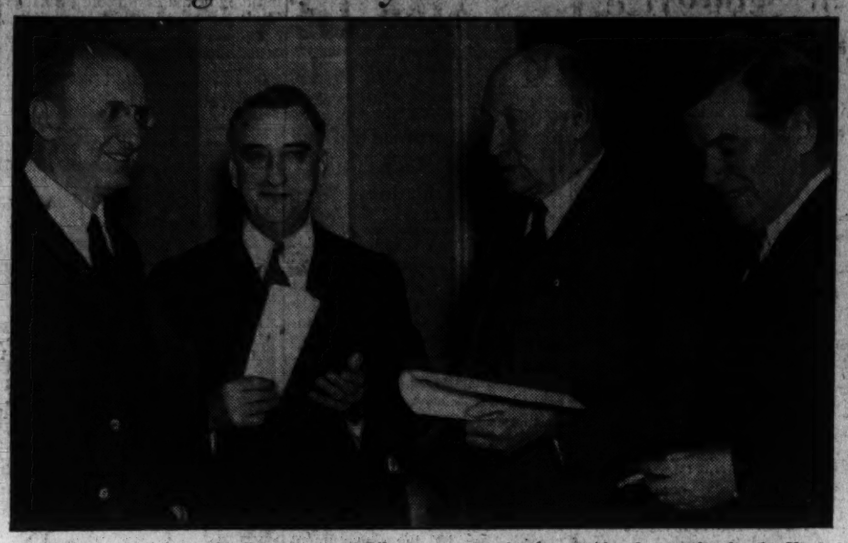
Refunding of Liberty Loan Bonds Considered



Legislation concerning refunding of second Liberty Loan bonds was considered yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee, meeting with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Left to right are Secretary Morgenthau, Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky; Representative Robert L. Doughton, chairman, and Representative Wesley E. Disney, of Oklahoma.

Glass Attacks Board Rotation Plan of Eccles

Limited Regional Tenure Penalizes Experience, Says Virginian.

(Associated Press.)

Carter Glass, of Virginia, stern Senate foe of many New Deal banking ways, last night found new fault with Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, whose qualifications he is critically examining.

The caustic Virginian, chairman of a sub-committee to which the Eccles nomination was referred yesterday for investigation, assailed the recently imposed limitation upon the length of service of reserve bank directors as an "unjustifiable penalty upon experience."

Meanwhile, another major Administration financial proposal slipped quietly and unanimously through the House Ways and Means Committee, after a brief explanation by Secretary Morgenthau—a measure authorizing additional issues of Government bonds to the extent of $9,000,000,000, including bonds of small denomination.

Silent on Bond Proposal.

Glass declined to comment on the bond proposal, but was outspoken in his criticism of the latest Eccles move, which had been explained as intended to rotate the directorates of the reserve banks and permit representation from time to time of all business interests in the region served.

It was, however, generally interpreted as part of a plan to make the Reserve System more amenable to control from Washington by permitting the replacement of recalcitrant directors with men more in sympathy with the program and objectives of the New Deal.

To such an extension of authority, Glass, a coauthor of the Federal Reserve act and long considered the Senate's outstanding authority on banking legislation, is unalterably opposed. In fact, he favors separation of the Treasury and the Reserve System.

Would Limit Members Here.

"It would be better," he said yesterday of the new Eccles proposal, "to put a limit on the service of the members of the Reserve Board here, and keep it from getting static."

The incident follows by less than a month the altercation between Glass and Eccles over the latter's imposition of a 2½ per cent maximum interest rate for member banks on time and saving deposits. Glass did not question the Reserve Board's right to take such action, but objected to the fact that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation also issued a similar order and that both were announced at once by Eccles.

The corporation explained it did so by implied authority, and later held in abeyance the order until February 1, with the intention of seeking legislation in the interim. Glass contended that Eccles' announcement of the FDIC action gave weight to an illegal act.

The Virginian said yesterday he would be in no hurry in calling the sub-committee, an offshoot of the Committee on Banking and Currency, together to consider the Eccles nomination. Meanwhile it is understood to be his intention to gather information on Eccles which he will lay before that group.

Du Ponts Announce Fool-Proof Explosive

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 22 (AP).—Discovery of a new high explosive, nitroammonia—the first fool-proof explosive—was announced today by the du Pont Co.

Twenty per cent stronger than TNT, the new stuff has been shot at with rifles, thrown into fires, bored with red-hot irons, subjected to blow torches and beaten with 50-pound triphammers without exploding. The only thing that detonates it is a full-size dynamite cartridge.

Rebels Wring a Compromise On Works Measure in House

volced acid criticism of the President's announced purpose to cut below private wage scales on the works projects.

He flailed the air angrily as he read a telegram from a New England labor organization opposing "cheap labor" on Federal jobs. He added that the American Federation of Labor was unalterably against such a policy and wanted Congress to legislate against it.

Illegal, Charges Bulwinkle.

Representative Bulwinkle, North Carolina, broad-shouldered and deep of voice, charged the bill was unconstitutional and that it represented "abdication" by Congress of its legislative powers. He contended the measure was in clear violation of the principles laid down recently by the Supreme Court in its "hot oil" decision.

He described as "very dangerous" a clause which would authorize the President to invoke the power of eminent domain in the purchase of personal as well as real property.

Representative Pettengill, Indiana, his black hair tousled, protested that the bill contained "no limitation" on the President's authority to spend the money.

"This bill is entirely too broad," he said. "I campaigned on a promise that I'd vote for no more Government lending to factories. I said I would oppose all governmental competition with private business. If the President and Mr. Ickes contemplate continuing to do that I'll have to vote against the bill."

Others attacked the penalty clause as likely to permit the President to "impose any criminal laws he wants."

Ickes' Name Injected.

The name of Secretary Ickes was injected into the discussion by several members who wish to remove all possibility of his appointment as head of the agency to administer the works program. One of the sections opened to amendment from the floor would authorize the President to combine or create administrative bureaus. An amendment to block election of Ickes probably will be offered.

Noncommittee amendments also will be permitted on the penalty clause and the article to permit purchase of property which owners do not wish to sell.

Byrns informed the caucus he had been assured by the President that Mr. Roosevelt would personally pass on all allocations of funds.

Republicans and insurgent Democrats alike were jubilant over the turn of events and believed they would be able to put through at least two or three amendments. The G. O. P. will make no effort to reduce the appropriation. Instead, it will concentrate on efforts to limit the discretionary authority of the President and to incorporate safeguards against Federal competition with private business. They also will seek amendment to provide for apportionment of the money among the States on the basis of the number of their unemployed.

Representative Snell, minority leader, declared the Democrats "exhibited fear" when they forced adjournment of the House yesterday rather than let the works bill be assailed during consideration of other measures.

White House Calls Parley on NRA

for one or two years; (2) permanent NRA legislation, limiting codes to wage and hour provisions, abolition of child labor, and fair practices; and (3) enactment of the second proposal on a temporary basis.

In all that he has said and done, Mr. Roosevelt has indicated he looks upon the NRA as a means for enforcing certain essentials the Administration is not prepared to give up. He envisages it as a continuing agency, evolutionary in nature, which may have to be changed from time to time before an ultimate solution is found.

It was from this viewpoint, therefore, that NRA legislation was discussed last night. In this connection, the point was made in one quarter that Supreme Court decisions on such cases as the Belcher case, which involves the right to set maximum hours, will be closely watched.

Meantime, introduction of the bill in Congress this week to give labor equal representation on all NRA code authorities was promised by Representative William P. Connery, jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee.

Addressing an NRA hearing on reopening the Massachusetts boot and shoe code, Connery declared, "Just as soon as my bill is introduced it will be referred to the committee on labor, at which time we shall begin calling in all interested parties for a hearing on code administration under the NRA."

Few code authorities now provide for labor representation; and a concession on this point recently by coal operators was hailed as a significant labor victory. During his remarks, Connery declared if the shoe code is not reopened to eliminate certain "injustices" he will seek congressional action to force it open.

45 Brought Ashore From Doomed Ship

Victoria, British Columbia, Jan. 22 (AP).—Rescued at sea after losing a terrific battle with a tempest, 45 members of the crew of the Japanese freighter Hokuman Maru were brought to Victoria today aboard the President Jackson.

Their abandoned ship was sinking about 150 miles off Vancouver Island. The U. S. Coast Guard cutter Chelan raced to the scene to remove her from the ship lane or destroy her as a menace to navigation. A cracked plate in No. 5 hold, said K. Iwata, of the Yamashita line, caused the disaster.

Warships to Quell Uprising on Isle

Italian Battle Craft on Way to Kalymnos.

Athens, Greece, Jan. 22 (AP).—Reports tonight said Italian warships were en route to Kalymnos, one of the Dodecanese group of islands, after an uprising of the populace there. Martial law was said to have been proclaimed as a result of several clashes.

Rome, Jan. 22 (AP).—Government circles, expressing surprise at reports of trouble on the Kalymnos Island, said tonight they knew of no orders for the dispatch of Italian waships.

The small island of Kalymnos, close to the southeast coast of Turkish Asia Minor, is largely inhabited by Greeks. It passed from Turkish to Italian hands in 1912.

Virgin Islands Lead to Rift In the Cabinet

Ickes and Farley Found To Differ Over Gov. Pearsons.

Raymond Gram Swing, according to the Interior Department release, but in the weekly signed only with the initials "R. G. S.," defended Mr. Pearson as an "able, nonpolitical governor" and hinted at a conspiracy of other Government officers in the islands to blacken the Pearson regime.

The article, however, was chiefly devoted to the trial and conviction of Leonard W. McIntosh, chief clerk of the public works department, on charges of appropriating for his own use Government property valued at $48. Although McIntosh showed he had given the Government in services and other commodities value for what he had taken and that his actions were approved by his superior, he was convicted and fined $200 by Judge T. Weber Wilson, the magazine related.

Holding this case "promises to become notorious in American jurisprudence," the article stated that Judge Wilson acted "both as prosecutor and judge, sentenced a Government employe whom the Government refused to prosecute."

Webber's Status Questioned.

The article says that the charge against McIntosh was originally made by Eli Baer, of Baltimore, as Government atotrney, but that he was dismissed after an Interior Department inquiry failed to substantiate his charges that the islands were "reeking with corruption."

"A point to be noted," the article explains, "is that if McIntosh could be convicted, it would do something to justify the broadside attacks on the Pearson administration and the Department of the Interior. A further point is that if Gov. Pearson were removed he might be succeeded by none other than the ambitions judge in this case, T. Weber Wilson, a Democratic politician not under the Interior jurisdiction. And still another point is that if Wilson became Governor there would be twenty-five jobs to be distributed among 'worthy' Democratic office-seekers."

Judge Wilson, former member of Congress from Mississippi, is described as "a party man out of a job" who reached the Virgin Island bench "through the Department of Justice via Homer Cummings via Jim Farley via Pat Harrison" and that "his effective qualification was that he 'deserved' to be taken care of."

In conclusion the Nation article asserted that "it must be assumed that Attorney-General Cummings knows about the remarkable attributes developed by his appointee but Wilson still retains his judgship" and that "the case is a further stigma on the practice of making political appointments without regard to fitness or ability."

Police Grilling Sixth Suspect In Slaying of 2

Officers Follow Cold Trail of Thugs Who Killed Transit Agents.

Guarding their every move with utmost secrecy, Maryland and District police yesterday pressed their investigation of the murder of two Capital Transit Co. employes in a holdup of the Chevy Chase car barn office early Monday.

The four men and one woman taken into custody late Monday and early yesterday were still being held, authorities refusing to divulge whether or not they had shed any light on the slaying of James M. Mitchell, 68, and L. Emory Smith, 40. One of the five is William F. Clarke, a former employe of the company, who surrendered here after learning he was wanted for questioning.

Clarke, who lives in the 800 block of F street northeast, is under detention at the Eighth Precinct police station. Willis Leadman, a Capital Transit carman, was held yesterday in the Bethesda substation of Montgomery County police, booked on a charge of investigation.

Sixth Suspect Quizzed.

The other three persons who were quizzed and kept in custody were Mary H. Branch and James D. Ware, who live at separate addresses in the 1400 block of Girard street northwest, and Joseph Goddard, of the 1400 block of Harvard street northwest.

Early last night another carman was brought into the Bethesda substation to face questioning.

A reward of $500 for information leading to the slayers' arrest and conviction was offered yesterday by the Montgomery board of commissioners, following announcement by the Capital Transit Co. that it will pay $1,000 for solution of the crime.

Following a cold trail, police investigators yesterday made pictures and took notes at the office-waiting room where Mitchell was shot and at the Rock Creek bridge half a mile up the Kensington road where the bandits dragged Smith out of their car to kill him and dump the body into the water.

D. C. Police on Scene.

In the group which visited the scenes were Detective Sergts. Frank Brass and Robert Barrett, of Washington; Sergts. T. F. Vollten and Leroy Rogers, of Montgomery police, and Detective Sergt. Stewart W. Deal, of Baltimore.

Mitchell's funeral will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at the family residence, 2216 Thirtieth street southeast. Following services in the Chapel of the Nativity, Massachusetts avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets southeast, the depot clerk's body will be laid to rest in Congressional Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements for Smith, who lived at 7241 Arlington avenue, Bethesda, will be announced later.

Farley to Tour City to Learn About Capital

Confesses He Knows Nothing of District Except Some Buildings.

"Frankly, I don't know anything about Washington," admitted Postmaster General James A. Farley yesterday at an Advertising Club luncheon in the National Press Club, "and I have seen very little of it with the exception of a few of the Government office buildings.

"Therefore I think I'll take a week's holiday during the Shrine convention here in June, and get around to see the town with the thousands of visitors then," he said.

The luncheon was a testimonial from the Advertising Club to Leonard P. Steuart, deputy imperial potentate of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and Robert P. Smith, newly elected potentate of the Almas Temple of the order, who will figure largely in the annual Shrine convocation. This will be held in Washington this year for the first time since 1923, when an estimated 150,000 Shriners thronged the town.

Public Citizen No. 2.

Introduced by Norman G. Kal, president of the Advertising Club, as Public Citizen No. 2, Mr. Farley observed:

"I understand that Mr. Steuart is to become imperial potentate at the June session. This convinces me that the politics of the Shrine organization are in good order, as we politicians usually can't pick the winners that far ahead."

He concluded by extending congratulations to the local members of the order for their work in securing the convention for Washington, and by expressing the opinion that the meet would be beneficial to local business.

Shrine Purposes.

Mr. Steuart discussed the purpose of the Shrine order, recalling that since the first Shriners' hospital for crippled children was built in 1922, about $20,000,000 has been spent for the relief of children, and that "50,000 little sufferers have been treated and discharged, either entirely cured or materially benefited.

He added that the Shrine patrols, bands and other picturesquely garbed marching units are "walking poster effects which impress the public with the belief that behind all the rollicking pomp and pageantry is a spirit of genuine and sane brotherhood."

Mr. Smith recited statistics to show that the influx of thousands of convention-goers will spurt business in every line. He said that the meet will begin with water sports events and parades on June 9 of this year.

Plan Proposed For Schooling Of Transients

Educational Program Is Presented to Street by Committee.

A more extensive educational program for the transient charges of the District was suggested yesterday by the advisory committee on transients at a meeting in the office of Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare.

The committee, which has visited every lodge and building of the Transient Bureau in the last two weeks, disclosed that Washington has a high type of transient, including many college and high school graduates.

From interviews with the men, the committee concluded 85 per cent of all transients are anxious to work. To this end, the committee will confer with the District Emergency Work Administration to provide a more diversified work program.

The recreational program, the committee proposed, should take the form of an educational plan, with emphasis on discussion groups for the 2,200 transients.

One need, the committee found, is for more adequate medical facilities. The infirmary for whites on John Marshall place and C street must be vacated by February 1. In this respect, it was pointed out, the transients are ineligible for treatment at municipal hospitals because they are not District residents and the FERA does not allow funds for paying hospital expenses.

Of the 2,200 transients, there are 339 families of two or more, it was reported. In the whole group, there are but 67 single women.

The committee proposed a general policy of getting transients to their homes and pending this distribution, the feasibility of placing them in camps will be studied.

Loan of U.S. Boat Proposed to Test Fire Apparatus

Possibility of obtaining an obsolete vessel from the Government for use in testing fire apparatus and fire preventive equipment was under consideration by the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection yesterday.

The suggestion came from Henry B. Cross, of the National Fire Protective Association. Mr. Cross said he believed the Government would be glad to contribute a ship, and that the manufacturers of fire fighting and fire preventive materials would cooperate.

He pointed out that the shore line just off New York City was ideal for such experimentation because of the accessibility of fire boats and other conveniences in the test.

Shoreham Bills A Dance Team, Comic Cyclist

Ernestine Gardner and Froom Are Back at Bamboo Room.

By Kay Ware.

Shoreham changes its floor show and bills these names: Cunningham and Clements, dance team; Will Lacy, the comic cyclist just back from European music halls. Held over is Violet Bache, who dances with fans and what not, and Ewen Hail, tenor and master of ceremonies.

Social list: Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Roosevelt, Mr. Justice McReynolds, Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Miss Lyla Townsend, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Perry L. Miles, the Military Attache of the Chinese Legation and Mrs. T. M. Chow.

Tiny in the lounge must be about ready to reveal the winner of his parody contest on "You're the Top." Anyway, he has several new lyrics. If you're tired of this number, ask him for "Three Little Babes in the Woods"—or was it two?

Da Costa's Tango Orchestra attracts good dancers.

Donald Novis refused to sing at Hi-Hat, and chose to surround himself with the Paradise Islanders—the proper name for the Hawaiians—who sang their lovely "Song of the Islands."

Incidentally Don Novis was interested in the Hawaiians for several reasons, inasmuch as Duke Kahanamoku, former swimming champion, is a friend of his.

Charles Opunui, huskiest of the islanders, is doing some steel guitar numbers by request.

At the Willard's Bamboo Room there's plenty of cause for celebrating. Ernestine Gardner is back from the Eastern Shore, Fenton Froom returns to sing, although he's carrying a 12-pound brace on his back. Then, too, Johnny Slaughter is booked for the Bal Boheme, and finds himself swamped with radio fan mail.

Two band leaders dropped out of town for the week-end. But not for the same reason. Barnee of the Shoreham went to New York to get some new orchestra ideas. Pete Macias went to the same town to get a glimpse of the motor boat show.

Pete has a gadget that is worth a gasp or two. It's a little dancing figure, perched on a diaphragm, with a microphone attached. You talk into the mike and the figure dances. Best of all, let Pete play the piano and watch the little dancer cavort!

Monday night the Cansinos appeared, offered three dances and two encores. The demonstration of approval was unusual for Monday night clubbers.

One gets used to mysteries. Night club managers have been almost dependent upon the "surprise reaction." However, the latest is at the Mayflower. Please, does any one know the identity of the clever couple who asked Sidney's orchestra for an almost unknown tango, broke into a tango Argentino that stopped all the other dancers, dipped and swirled with elaborate steps?

And is there anything more disheartening to the tango novice, struggling with the fundamental steps, than to see a couple like this on a dance floor.

Social list: Gay party given by Wesley Frame, U. of M. grad. Saturday night included Rosalind Kress, Catherine Farrell, Dorothy Dodge, Mae Harris Clarke, and Vincent Tompkins.

Madrillon offers the Di Gatanos—Jayne and Adam—dance team from London, with a version of the "Continental" and a whirlwind waltz. Mary Miller, singing dancer, is a vivid little debutante with double features. Jach Schaeffer has a new song you'll like—"Laugh! I Thought I'd Die!" He's doing things with "No, No, a Thousand Times No."

Shades of Xavier Cugat—or at least, his inspiration—hovers over the "Dusk Tango," danced by Tarrant and Dacita at Club Habana. Cugat not only wrote the music, but personally scored and arranged the number for the dance team and Moe Baer's boys. It's a tango based on grace, finesse and fire, rather than mere slinkiness.

Billy McIntyre adds the Broadway touch with impersonations and tap dances.

Line-up at the Lotus: A chorus of eight girls, two of whom do specialties. Ruth Joy contributes a buck and wing. Ramon and Renee, dance team, and Seldon and Ender, comedy duo, and dancing Mary Chrysler, complete the imported bill.

Al Norton is a show in himself; Judy Ellington, Dick Koons and the Capitolians, headed by Bill Strickland, make up the regulars.

Club Troika's floor show changes acts, costumes, music and in some cases, mental attitude. There's the gypsy contralto, a gypsy singing and playing trio, the speed demon sword dancer, Mike and his violin, a comedian who sings and plays the clarinet, another contralto formerly with the Moscow Arts Theater, and a concert pianist. All this, plus Matt Windsor and accordion, the big basso who makes you weep with "I Kiss Your Hand, Madame." And the Pagliacci number.

All of which is more than a floor show: It's a Russian revolution. (According to Mr. Brian Brown.)

Socialites gather under the rough, hewn roof of Pilgrims Club. What with good food, and a good band, it's no wonder.

If you wonder about the gold chairs, in a stockade, please be advised that Billy Barrington, decorator, was concerned with them, too, and said, "I know they should be brown, but I didn't have time to stain them."

The Embassy Cocktail Lounge, adjoining the Embassy Restaurant, is a combination of blue and white walls, a restful atmosphere, modernistic lighting fixtures and theater crowds. Just right for that afternoon sip, or the late evening long one.

Billy Scully continues to be the top-notch attraction at Club l'Hiver. Their arrangements are from Casa Loma Band, adapted to fit the Scully style. The new floor show features Fern and Lorraine, dance team, Sid Wynn, with blue songs, Fran Trapp and Charles Mayer with songs and accordion solos.

Broadway Skyline.

OBSERVATIONS: Mrs. Harry Warner, wife of the famous H. M. Warner, flicker king, is the comeliest of the town's matrons! . . . Deak Aylesworth, head of the National Broadcasting Company, is the most genial of the town's big shots and happiest when he and Mrs. Aylesworth take their young daughter to a First Night. . . . Anna Roosevelt pohtographs best of the celebs, her blonde beauty rivaling that of the movie queens. . . . Lois Long and Adela Rogers St. John prefer to discuss their children . . . Most interesting and unusual library of camera shots belongs to Bill Plankinton, wealthy Milwaukee youngster (the camera is his hobby and he sends copies of his pictures to his Park avenue intimates). . . . Nat Moss, leaving for Miami to convalesce, first played in a poker game and won $100, his railroad fare to and from. . . . Al Trahan startled the audience at a Sunday performance by shouting "Thief" at Milton Berle from the audience, claiming that Berle was doing his (Trahan's) act . . . Trahan refused to permit Berle to introduce him, and the Hotel Astor committee had to substitute another master of ceremonies to placate him.

FROM GENE TUNNEY: "That line you ran the other day about Mrs. Tunney, that 'she was as refreshing as a spring breeze,' is the finest description of her that I've ever heard. She is exactly like that, but then, of course, I may be just a bit prejudiced."

JIM DOOLING, the Tammany leader, would be an interesting study for an artist . . . Accustomed as New York is to older and grayer political leaders, the youthfulness of Dooling is startling . . . But for all of that, he is stern and close-mouthed and politically acute . . . Independently wealthy, his candidacy was disregarded by the professional politicos when the name of Dooling was first listed in this column as the "dark horse" of the race . . . People called me up from all over the city to urge that I retract the paragraph before I was made to look ridiculous . . . A coalition of Tammany leaders scoffed at this column's suggestion that Dooling would win out . . . Then one night Postmaster General James A. Farley called me aside: "That line on Dooling is going to be a nice feather in your cap" . . . That's all he'd say, but from then on I felt better . . . Dooling got in, and in six months, he's done a magnificent job.

TIMES SQUARE NOTES: Priscilla Lane, of the Fred Waring program, and Jack Cummins, Cleveland golfer, are romancing . . . Behind-the-Scenes: Joe Phillips, pint-sized comic, was on the stage at Loew's Jersey City when the wire arrived from Florida telling of his dad's death . . . Carole Lombard must be back on the Coast by February 4, to start on a flicker with Gary Cooper . . . Peggy Rich and Percy Stover are hot-spotting . . . The ex-Mrs. Michael Cudahy (Muriel Evans) will wed Marshall Wooster when the final decree arrives . . . Barbara MacDonald, now dancing in Detroit, gets an armful of flowers every night from a local jeweler . . . Isabel Jewell's newest distraction is the social Bill Collins . . .

MOST DARING casting of the season: Casting of Roland Young, a light comedian, as the cringing, thieving Uriah Heep in Director George Cukor's filming of "David Copperfield" . . . Critics disagree as to the worth of his performance, but the daring and imagination of the Coasters to conceive a light comedian in this leering role is to be applauded.

Before Barbara Hutton and her cousin, Jimmy Donahue sailed, five of us squandered an evening on night clubs, starting at Central Park Casino and finishing up at 6 a. m., at Jimmy Kelly's.

Much has been written, all over the country, of the $5,000 which the princess sent to this column, to distribute in the form of Christmas baskets to 15,000 New York poor . . . Throughout it all, my pledge of secrecy forced a silence which at times was irritating to maintain.

Jimmy Donahue summed it all up the other morning: "Barbara and the family don't know yet how at times you held your tongue, when you could have answered so easily. The fact that you promised to keep her out of it, and kept your promise, impressed her and the family even more than the thousands of letters which arrived from all over the country. As she told you, she gave you the $5,000 because she had always felt that your column never had been malicious, or nasty. And then, when you were 'on the spot' and kept your promise of silence, she was tremendously impressed and grateful."

One columnist who rushed into the situation at the time, animated as he said by nobility of purpose, displayed this for all to see just before Barbara sailed. He wrote that she was arranging a divorce in New York. At the time, she was recovering from a month's illness.

Architect Unit Names Taylor As New Head

Sessions of Society to Be Concluded in Capital Today.

The inadequacy of what he termed the "water-tight compartment idea" in the education of architects and landscape architects in the light of present-day cultural necessities, formed the subject of an address by George Young, dean of the school of architecture of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., at the second-day session of the three-day convention of the American Society of Landscape Architects yesterday.

At the meeting, held in the Mayflower Hotel, Dean Young developed his idea in the direction of greater freedom and flexibility in modern educational methods. He stated that a student "flunking" in one subject is not necessarily unfitted for all subjects, and stressed the importance during times of rapid progress in all lines of equipping architects with a broad understanding of general trends, as well as of those trends affecting their specialty.

During the day A. F. Brinkerhoff, of New York City, was appointed head of a committee on professional relations with the United States Government. The committee will endeavor to find means to employ for public benefit those landscape architects whose services are not being utilized on housing commissions and public works projects.

The annual elections saw A. D. Taylor, of Cleveland, Ohio, a consultant landscape architect, and member of the commission planning the Ohio Muklngum Valley project, elected president of the society, succeeding Henry V. Hubbard, of Boston, Mass., a professor at Harvard University.

Earl S. Draper, now working on the Tennessee Valley project, was chosen vice president; Prof. Hubbard and Arthur Hadden Alexander, of Cleveland, Ohio, were elected trustees, and Gordon D. Cooper, of Cleveland, and Norman T. Newton, of New York City, were installed as auditors.

Other speakers yesterday included Clarence Fowler, of New York City, and John Nolen, of Cambridge, Mass., a consultant land planner of Boston. Mr. Nolen spoke on "The Landscape Architect's Place in State and Regional Planning." Thomas D. Desmond, of Simsbury, Conn., presided at the day's technical discussion session in the afternoon.

The society's members were the guests at a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Eliot in the Eliot home, 2501 Foxhall road, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Eliot is executive secretary of the National Resources Board.

At an informal supper held last night in the hotel, the members heard an illustrated lecture by Prof. Morley J. Williams of Harvard on "The Educational Value of Early American Landscape Architecture."

Sessions will conclude today with business and technical meetings.

Ex-Envoy Denies Playing Cupid Role

Hart Says He Did Not Seek Rich Bride for Zog.

One of the season's best stories was spoiled yesterday when Charles C. Hart, former Minister to Albania, denied, according to the Associated Press, he had acted as a "diplomatic Cupid" in an attempt to find King Zog an American bride with a $1,000,000 a year income.

Zog sought Hart's assistance, Vienna dispatches said, in finding an American girl with beauty, ability and a hefty annual income. Hart was reported to have surveyed the field here, and then to have given Zog a list of Yankee dollar princesses.

A former newspaperman, Hart said in a statement yesterday that the Albanian ruler never had made such a request of him, that he had made no survey of the marriage market here, and that he had not taken a list of marriageable millionairesses to the king.

New Wire to Provide Television, Pictures and Music Developed

Bell Telephone Laboratories Report Double Circuit Invention, Which Will Add New Wonders to Entertainment in Home.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—A new kind of telephone wire, which promises to be the television, picture and music wire of the future, was described today to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

The new circuit is a wire within a wire. It is capable of concentrating within a channel half an inch wide a band of 1,000,000-cycle electrical energies which hitherto have needed open-air and radio waves to escape interference.

It was reported by Lloyd Espenschied and M. E. Strieby, of the Bell Telephone Laboratories. The experiments on this wire are already complete, but they said it will probably not come into commercial use until television or enlarged wire facilities demand.

The wire is a hollow tube with a solid wire inside. Both are conductors. They are insulated from each other largely by air. Espenchied said that wires of this form have been used a little for many years, but never in the new way now perfected.

The double wire uses the "skin-effect," the fact that electricity likes to travel on the outside of a wire. The 1,000,000-cycle frequencies in this new channel travel on the outside skin of the inner wire and on the inside skin of the hollow tube surrounding it.

The outer skin of the hollow tube acts to carry the undesired, interfering electrical frequencies. This outside skin becomes the shield of the wire. It can carry a band of electrical energies which may be either subdivided into 200 telephone circuits or used en bloc for television. It can be worked both directions simultaneously.

Signals pass over the new wire at nearly the speed of light. In many other types of wire the current travels only a little more than 10,000 miles a second, which is enough delay over very long distances to cause a little distortion in voice or other sounds.

4 to Face Jury On Gun Charge

Others Seized in Round-up of Undesirables Told to Leave City.

Described by police as instigators of a plot to launch wholesale gang activities in Washington, four men demanded jury trials yesterday when arraigned in Police Court on charges of carrying concealed weapons.

The men, captured in a week-end round-up of suspected gangsters, gave names of Igon Steinberg, 33; Julius Spivak, 36, both of Baltimore; Sam Greene, 34, of the 700 block of Eleventh street northwest, and George C. Williams, 28, of the 1600 block of Q street northwest. With the exception of Steinberg, bonds of $3,000 each were set by Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

Steinberg faced an additional count—violation of section 3 of the District firearms act. This, it was explained, makes it a misdemeanor to carry a deadly weapon after conviction of a crime of violence. Police said Steinberg was convicted on robbery charges some time ago. His bond was set at $6,000.

Nearly a score of suspects were arrested in a 24-hour drive to rid Washington of "undesirables." Besides the four men arraigned in court, four others are still held on open charges. Several, including three women, were released after questioning and warned to leave the city.

Government Dismisses Charges of Mail Fraud

Oklahoma, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Federal Government today wiped the C. C. Julian oil and royalty mail fraud case from its criminal slate by dismissing charges against the remaining 23 defendants.

United States District Attorney W. C. Lewis said many of the defendants have not been apprehended and it would cost the Government too much money to try the few left in the case, whom he classified as secondary defendants.

Six Months' Term Given On Perjury Charges

Westminster, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Truman S. Smith, of Union Bridge, Carroll County, was found guilty of perjury by a circuit court jury here yesterday, and sentenced to six months in the Carroll County Jail.

Smith, according to the indictment, swore to information that he had purchased alcoholic beverages from a Mrs. Zelma Whitmore, of Union Bridge, and later at a hearing before the local magistrate, testified, under oath, that he had not purchased the liquor.

Roosevelt Note Limits Powers Of Labor Board

Boyd's Authority in Cases Such as Newspaperman's Is Questioned.

action jubilantly and immediately called off a meeting, set for New York January 28, to which all publishers had been invited for the purpose of discussing their labor relations with the Government.

Despite denials, the report persisted that Secretary Perkins was so perturbed by the letter that she went to the President with a request that he either withhold it or modify it. The fact that there was a two-hour delay in making the letter public after it had been received at the office of the board and that representatives of publishers made public their comment on the document nearly that long before the letter was released lent strength to the report.

Case of Jennings.

The dispute involves the case of Jennings, a rewrite man, who was discharged by the Call-Bulletin. Jennings insisted that he had been discharged because of activities in behalf of the Newspaper Guild and that his discharge was in violation of Section 7(a) of the recovery act. Unlike most industries, the newspaper publishing industry has its own industrial board. The case, however, was taken to the National Labor Relations Board, which assumed jurisdiction.

After a hearing, at which the publisher, protesting lack of jurisdiction, was not represented, the Labor Board ordered that Jennings be reinstated and recommended that the NRA withdraw the paper's Blue Eagle. Donal R. Richberg, NRA coordinator, and Blackwell Smith, NRA legal counsel, protested that the National Board had no jurisdiction and that the case should be handled by the newspaper board. The President's letter yesterday upheld that contention.

The NRA referred the Blue Eagle suggestion to the newspaper board, composed of four employes' representatives and four publishers' representatives. The board deadlocked, four to four, and threw the case back in the laps of the National Industrial Recovery Board, where it remains. The American Newspaper Publishers Association strongly protested the action of the National Labor Relations Board.

President's Letter.

The President said in his letter to Biddle that "less than five" of the codes contained provisions for boards to settle labor disputes within their own industries. Besides the newspaper code, these include the bituminous coal code and the petroleum code.

"It is, of course," the President said, "clear to me that it is reasonable that some provision for appeal should be a part of Government policy. Nevertheless, the fact that the Government has approved this provision (a separate board) in these very few codes, makes it imperative that the Government should live up to the letter of the agreement as long as those codes remain in effect."

The President appended three rules which he asked be followed:

1. That the National Labor Relations Board refuse to consider an appeal or to take any action in connection with an industry having its own board.

2. That in a situation in which complaint is made that a code labor board is not qualified or is improperly contituted the National Labor Relations Board should investigate and report to the President.

3. That where a complaint is made that the decision of a code industrial board is contrary to existing interpretations of section 7 (a) the National Labor Relations Board shall investigate and report to the President.

Interpretation of Rule.

The presidential rules were interpreted as giving the code industrial boards final jurisdiction in labor disputes except in cases in which the board may be improperly constituted or may misinterpret Section 7(a), in which case the President himself will decide, with the advice of the national board.

The situation now resolves itself into one in which the national board contends the case has been adjudicated, the NRA contends that this is not true because the board never had jurisdiction, and the code industrial board is deadlocked. It was suggested at NRA that the recovery organization probably would insist that the Newspaper Industrial Board agree upon a ninth member, who would act as an impartial chairman, and cast the deciding vote.

Howard Davis, chairman of the Newspaper Code Authority, in calling off the proposed New York meeting, told publishers that "a satisfactory adjustment of the differences which necessitated the call has been made. The methods of procedure set up in the code for the determination of all labor controversies have been sustained."

Textile Firms Fail in Court On Code Fight

Attempt to Outlaw Change Loses Here Before Justice Atkins.

Ninety-two cotton textile manufacturers yesterday lost, in the District Supreme Court, their first attempt to outlaw a drastic change in the code of fair competition for the cotton garment industry.

In a ruling made by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, the manufacturers, employing some 200,000 workers, and producing many millions of dollars worth of cotton garments annually, were held to be bound by an amendment to the code that raised the salary scale and lowered the hours of work per week.

The manufacturers, in a concerted drive, had claimed three things were wrong with the amendment which President Roosevelt imposed on the industry last August.

Manufacturers' Charges.

First, they charged, he had not decreed a sufficient distinction between garments produced by prison labor and those manufactured in free labor plants. Second, that the President did not have the power, nor had he followed the procedure necessary, to impose an amendment in the code, and third, that the boycott against their products which would follow withdrawal of the Blue Eagle would constitute unfair competition.

Justice Adkins, in a lengthy decision, said that he was not called upon to rule on the constitutionality of the original code. Both sides had agreed that the original drawing of the code of fair competition was valid.

The complainants insisted that the President had no right to inflict upon them an amendment to a code upon which they had agreed, and which resulted in a major decrease in hours per week with a corresponding increase in salary. They pointed out that their workers had been cut to a 36-hour week, but were being paid on a 40-hour week basis.

Statement of Justice.

Justice Adkins said that "A code may fix maximum hours of labor experimentally and provide for a change therein by the President after experience has shown that the period fixed was too long."

The object of the code, he said, was to increase wages and employment, together with purchasing power. It was shown that the first was slightly increased, but that employment in the cotton garment industry had decreased about 2 per cent. Therefore, when the President, after consideration of the facts, ordered a lowering of the hours per week, with a continuation of the old wage scale, he was acting to increase employment and purchasing power, Justice Adkins said.

Since both sides conceded the original code was legal, Justice Adkins said, the only problem before him was to consider the validity of the amendment. It was unconceivable, he wrote, to say that Congress could originate the laws governing the code and could not prescribe the method of changing objectionable features. Otherwise "unless the code can be amended, the will of Congress will be frustrated."

Prison Labor.

In respect to the prison labor challenge, the jurist said it was a necessary part of the rehabilitation of felons to provide them with work to keep them busy. He said that to disallow the Blue Eagle from prison made garments would be to wipe out the beneficial work of the Prison Labor Authority, which had assented to a code of fair competition which placed prison labor on a par with free labor.

Justice Adkin's ruling lifted the embargo against the removal of the Blue Eagle from the complaining manufacturers. Unless they assent to the code amendment, at least temporarily, the Blue Eagle may be removed from them. Assistant United States Attorneys David A. Pine and John J. Wilson, who represented the Government, said that the next step would be a more complete presentation of the case when the facts would be presented by witnesses.

Traffic 'Trap' In Mt. Rainier Facing Probe

Committee Will Report on Muchly Maligned Traffic Lights.

Mayor Norman A. Pruitt of Mount Rainier has appointed a committee of prominent citizens to investigate the town's traffic lights. Bird H. Dolby, corporation counsel for the town, heads the group.

The lights, located at the intersection of Thirty-fourth and Perry streets and Rhode Island avenue, just across the District line, have been the cause of no end of trouble for the town officials since their installation several years ago.

Situated in just the opposite position of traffic lights in Washington, the signals in Mount Rainier have been characterized as a "trap." During the last year the American Automobile Association waged a campaign against them.

The committee included two former mayors—Perry Boswell, now president of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners, and Fred Negus. John T. Duever, a former councilman who waged a strong fight against the lights last year, was also placed on the committee.

Others on the committee are Frank B. Smith, local editor; Karl A. Young, chief of the local fire department; Bernard Beall, Oscar T. Harlow, Louis Lewis, Paul Hysan, B. R. Sherwood, former town clerk-treasurer; William T. Daniels, V. E. Carneal, J. Harrison Miller, W. A. Jones, Dr. Harry Nally, Gilbert Hughes and Philip T. Russell.

The committee was instructed by Mayor Pruitt to make a thorough investigation of the lights and to report their findings along with any recommendations to the town officials as soon as possible.

Broad Review In Order.

Whatever may have been Judge Bentley's reason for committing William Fanning and Arthur Penn to the National Training School for Boys, she has acted wisely in considering a review of the case. The public has been truly aroused over the apparent severity of the court's action, and there is a widespread demand for clarification of the procedure to be followed in instances of this kind.

Corporation Counsel Prettyman undoubtedly voices a general sentiment when he advocates "leaning over backward" to insure completeness of hearing for any accused individual. When the careers of two youngsters are involved, that principle becomes doubly applicable. It is a perhaps mistaken belief that their case was hastily concluded, without exploring all the practical alternatives to commitment in the Training School, which has produced public criticism. Judge Bentley will doubtless be more interested than anyone else in modifying that impression.

In view of Mr. Prettyman's assurance that the prosecution "would be happy to participate in a new trial of these boys" if the court cares to grant it, a rehearing would seem to be a matter of course. What action the court should take after every angle of the case has been developed must be left, of course, for Judge Bentley to decide. She has had wide experience in handling children. And there is a great deal of confidence in her judgment.

Investigation of the Juvenile Court's procedure, however, might very profitably go deeper than the disposition of this case. If there is no alternative to sending a youngster to the National Training School for a first offense, amendment of the law becomes an emergency matter. It is of the utmost importance that the court be equipped with all the authority necessary to safeguard children against any environment that is conducive to crime. Judge Bentley may well take advantage of this incident to press for a complete modernization of our Juvenile Court machinery.

Maritime Milk Toast.

A weekly pabulum of news from the maritime world (always wistfully perused by this land-locked department) makes it evident that one of the consequences of the five-day fog last week as far as shipping was concerned was the shortage of cigarettes on overdue vessels. A trifle shame-faced about it, the report hastens to explain that the paucity of passengers in the winter season makes for reduced supplies of such luxuries.

To anyone reared on a diet of "Captains Courageous," "Two Years Before the Mast" and such literary hardtack, it is downright distasteful to think thus of fog in terms of wan-faced passengers jittering about the smoking saloon in search of cigarette stubs. "Bah!" to such frippery, such milk toast.

For from fog at sea derive the saltiest and most barrel-chested traditions of the Dangerous Life. The tense maneuvering in a nebulous world of cotton batting, the mute tragedy of a lost dory, the ghostly hoot of a conch-horn, the fearful sound of breakers, the dank, dim dripping of the fog—and the horny-handed conquest of them all. Such, O Best Beloved, is fog at sea.

We're sorry we read the item.

A Timely Warning.

Those who are blithely campaigning for the 30-hour week would do well to note the report from New York that "about 90" shirt and blouse factories have decided to close because they can no longer pay the NRA scale of wages. The number of unemployed in Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey will thus, it is estimated, be increased by 20,000. The plants will remain inactive until the public is willing to pay the higher prices for shirts and blouses necessitated by the restrictions of the codes.

Results of this kind are inevitable when the costs of production are advanced to a point where operation of factories is no longer profitable. No doubt some of the mill workers who are about to lose their jobs are earning wages inadequate to support them in accord with the so-called American standard of living. Very possibly the closing of inefficient factories will in the long run be a social gain. But the point which stands out is that under the relatively careful administration of the NRA many thousands have been, and are being, thrown out of employment because there is insufficient demand for the goods they produce at the prices which manufacturers must charge to cover even their present pay rolls.

Adoption of the 30-hour week, without reduction of weekly salaries, would further increase prices without any equivalent increase in general purchasing power. As a matter of self-protection the American Federation of Labor should give attention to the essential relationship between increases of wage rates and the volume of goods which can be sold at higher prices. Failure to maintain this vital economic balance can only result in an intensification of unemployment and depression.

Before The Diet.

So far as it was addressed to the United States and Great Britain, the speech of Foreign Minister Hirota at the opening of the Japanese Diet was the essence of conciliation. To both countries it was designed to carry assurance that even after expiration of the present naval limitation treaty, at the end of 1936, Japan does not "intend to launch out on any expansion of armaments." Before the end of the two-year period for which the treaty is still in force, the Foreign Minister predicted, its place will have been taken by another pact "based on a new formula which shall be truly consonant with the spirit of disarmament."

This part of Mr. Hirota's speech will be well received in the United States. For, as former Undersecretary of State Castle has recently pointed out, it is time to "take a rest" from recriminations on the subject of comparative ratios of naval strength. Now that the system is gone it can and should be admitted that stereotyped armament ratios provide a very crude and arbitrary formula of disarmament.

They fail to take into account the constantly shifting tides of absolute and relative national strength which are both inevitable and desirable in a progressive world. The force of the argument is inescapable, if we apply it to ourselves. Suppose the United States had, in 1895, accepted a naval ratio vis-a-vis Great Britain and France, on the basis of our needs and ambitions of that date. Would we not, by 1907, have found that ratio as unsatisfactory as Japan found the ratios of 1922 another twelve years later?

What Foreign Minister Hirota, in common with many of his countrymen, appears to misunderstand is that the Japanese case for treaty revision was not opposed at London because unreasonable in itself. It was opposed because it could not be detached from the broader policy of economic, political and military expansion in the Far East on which Japan has been actively engaged for more than three years now. Some appreciation of the force of this mistrust was obviously in Mr. Hirota's mind as he addressed the Diet. "Our foreign trade, expanded as it is," he said, "actually amounts in volume to the insignificant figure of but 3 per cent of the total volume of world trade."

But for the political ambitions commonly attributed to his country Mr. Hirota did not feel it necessary to offer any mitigating evidence. On the contrary, the attention he paid to civil disorders in China, coupled with the reiteration that Japan is "the stabilizing force in East Asia," will only serve to augment doubts as to the policy his country has in mind. Obviously it fails to recognize that the day is past when any one nation can safely establish itself as sole arbiter for the destinies of a continent.

Mr. Hirota took occasion to remind the Diet that on March 27 Japan's resignation from the League of Nations becomes effective and asserted that from then on his country will carry "a greater burden of responsibility." It will indeed, if Japan seriously proposes to continue to set its single national will above and in conflict with the developing collective system of world peace.

"The foreign relations of a country," Mr. Hirota concluded, "are the reflection of the moral power and the material strength of its people." The definition is as revealing as it is inadequate. In the case of Japan, or any other power, a foreign policy which works solely from the doctrine that national strength knows no higher law will inevitably bring in its train first the suspicion and, if continued far enough, the active opposition of the civilized world.

Fainter Screen-Screams.

There is something sadly wrong with the most popular magazines. The most popular magazines, you need not be told, are those which treat exclusively of the motion-picture—and almost exclusively of the motion-picture's female stars. Yet signs appear that these powerful palladia are abandoning the highly personal revelations of screen-beauties which have, for a score of years, aroused curiosity and elevated eyebrows around millions of family steam-radiators.

It was only yesterday that cover announcements declared how Peggy Joyce "told all." For the trifling cost of 25 cents, anybody, we were assured, could read about "the secret loves" of some Joan Crawford, or the really broken heart that fluttered—oh, so faintly!—behind the glad smile of a Gloria Swanson. For a quarter, even the humblest was promised a peep into the complexes of a Janet Gaynor or a Jean Harlow. Now even the divorce of "America's Sweetheart" provides only one account of "Mary Pickford's Search for Happiness."

Can it be that the motion-picture magazines are going highbrow? Are the press agents running dry? Or are our Sovereigns of the Screen asserting a claim to privacy and a distaste for unrevealing revelations? Let us hope that the answer to all these questions is a negative, that the decline is temporary and that happy days will soon be here again.

The public of those publications has certain inalienable rights. In times like the present, such inalienable rights as remain to any group of citizens should be guarded jealously.

Trade With Canada.

Negotiation of a reciprocal trade agreement with Canada has been undertaken so many times without success that the difficulties of the current attempt are clearly recognized. The fact that the State Department has elected to begin discussions with the Dominion government, at a relatively early stage in the reciprocal trade program, indicates that no chance of extending our foreign trade is being neglected merely because it may involve intricate problems.

Canada is the only nation with which the United States has ever concluded a reciprocal trade agreement on a purely economic basis. Treaties of this kind with Hawaii and Cuba became effective in 1876 and 1903, respectively, but both agreements grew out of political considerations. Our treaty with Canada remained in effect for 11 years. Dissatisfaction on the part of agricultural interests and tension growing out of border incidents during the Civil War combined to influence a congressional vote for its abrogation.

Efforts to revive the treaty of 1854 have failed, sometimes for want of support in this country and sometimes through Canadian mistrust. Apparently both governments are now in a mood to make another attempt to revive trading on a reciprocal basis. But many of the obstacles which have obstructed this path in the past are still present and still formidable. And Canada has narrowed the latitude within which she may bargain by accepting and granting trade preferences for goods exchanged within the British Commonwealth of Nations.

In natural resources Canada is very similar to the northern part of the United States. Most agricultural exports from the Dominion compete directly with those of our Middle West. Industrial interests of the East have always been in favor of exchanging manufactured goods for Canadian raw materials. But it is not so easy to argue that the interests of domestic farmers coincide with such an arrangement.

In the negotiations now beginning the Administration must decide once more whether anything is to be gained by giving Canadian producers concessions on lumber, grain, cattle, potatoes, fish, etc. One of the foremost arguments in favor of the reciprocal trade policy is that it may extend the foreign market for American agricultural products. It goes without saying that a proposal tending to aid manufacturers at the expense of agriculture would be bitterly attacked in Congress and elsewhere.

Without the aid of reciprocal tariff arrangements Canada and the United States exchange noncompetitive or semicompetitive goods on a large scale. A notable increase in this trade has developed in recent months. It will be important to ascertain in advance what prospects there are for effecting any further substantial improvement through reciprocal concessions, without aggravating the depression in our own raw material industries.

International Justice.

Far back in March of 1929, a United States cutter shelled and sank a schooner of Canadian registry some 200 miles off the American coast in the Gulf of Mexico. The vessel, known as the I'm Alone, was a rum runner and the eighteenth amendment had not been repealed. Two days ago the Secretary of State forwarded to Ottawa a formal note of apology together with assurances that he would recommend an appropriation to recompense the surviving members of the crew in amounts totaling $25,666 and to make material amends to His Majesty's Canadian government in the sum of $25,000.

The significant point is not that the restitution promises to follow after six years, nor that Canada had originally filed claims for $386,000, nor even that the once heated question as to the definition of "hot pursuit" was only inferentially considered. Of deeper import is the fact that two sovereign nations can and did settle such a difference with justice and concord. For this graceful achievement credit is due Justice Willis Van Devanter, commissioner for the United States, and the Right Hon. Lyman Poore Duff, representing Canada.

The settlement has a particular emphasis in view of the current debate on the World Court. Had the United States belonged to this tribunal and had both nations agreed to arbitrate the case before it, the judgment would probably have been rendered with greater dispatch, convenience and economy and, it is fair to assume, with comparable satisfaction to both parties.

It is apparent, moreover, that the case of the I'm Alone is not unusual. In a letter from the Secretary of State addressed to the House Committee on Foreign Affairs in 1932 the advantages of membership in the World Court in just such cases are summarized. Mr. Stimson then pointed out that:

> there are * * * numerous instances of private claims which this Government is called upon to espouse against foreign governments * * * which under present procedure require a resort to the expensive and often unsatisfactory machinery of special arbitral tribunals. (Many) requirements bring home to this department constantly the advantages that would acrue from * * * a permanent judicial tribunal to whom some of these issues could be entrusted.

It would seem that it has about come to pass that a political party that doesn't pass out passes out.

France is copying our NRA program. This will probably result in making her madder than ever with us.

The Brooklyn 7-year-old prodigy says he dislikes to argue. No wonder he rates such a high IQ!

Comment On Judge Bentley's Decision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just what, may I ask, is the purpose of Juvenile Court? I was always under the impression that this particular type of court was first instituted in order to really reach the heart of the young offender in a sympathetic, understanding manner—to make the courtroom a place where youngsters could tell the judge why the offense was committed. The ultimate aim, as I understood it, was to enable youngsters to see the light on life, and from then on to live as normal humans.

Above all else, the Juvenile Court was not a place where youngsters were dragged off to the reformatory in the twinkling of any eye, especially for a first offense and without benefit of trial.

Certainly Judge Bentley lacks understanding of the child mind, and from yesterday's occurrence, she obviously cares still less why children do things. It seems to me that no city can afford to trust the welfare of its offending youngsters to such a person. Removal of such a judge should be quickly effected.

A. J. SHANE.

Beltsville, Md., Jan. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to the front page of The Post of January 21, Judge Bentley is being severely criticized for doing her duty in sending the two boys to a reformatory until they become 21 years old. If parents can not control their children they ought to be thankful that there has been a place provided where they can be taken care of.

These boys had a home and a school had been provided for them where they might obtain an education and when they grew up there was a chance for them to fill positions of honor to themselves, their parents and the community in which they live. But they deceived their parents by running away from school and in order to escape the punishment due them, they committed a greater crime.

I think that the District should congratulate itself on having a judge like Miss Fay Bentley, who will do her duty without fear or favor to any one. L. L. POUND.

Elkwood, Va., Jan. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of the District of Columbia are deeply indebted to The Washington Post for the publicity it has given to the shocking sentence two boys received recently in Juvenile Court for first offenses.

Your editorial in the issue of January 21 is a particularly able one, and shows a deep understanding of the real issues in this case. More power to you.

HARRY R. LEE.

Washington, Jan. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In common with other Washington parents, I was amazed and shocked to read the account of the action taken in the Fanning and Penn cases in Juvenile Court. On every hand the reaction seems to be the same. Not knowing all of the facts in the case, it may be unfair to criticize this seemingly precipitate action of the court, but I have an incident to relate that may shed some light upon the action of the boys in seeking to avoid appearing before the court on a charge of truancy.

I am the father of three boys. I told the older boys of the case and they reminded me of the fact that several weeks ago they told me that a policeman had warned them about playing football in the street (we have no improved playground close by), and said that at the time the policeman said they must not play football in the street he had further remarked that if he arrested them for it, they would have to go to Juvenile Court, and "they have a 'tight' judge there now."

Such a reputation among policemen must have some foundation.

I believe the parents of Washington children are interested in all the facts in this case and I hope your paper will attempt to present them impartially.

JAMES E. SCHWAB.

Washington, Jan. 21.

Editor's Note.

Many correspondents have based their comments on an erroneous impression that neither boy in this case has a previous record of delinquency. Such is not the case. The Post having reiterated the fact that one has been implicated previously in juvenile misdemeanors. The other has no record other than the charges directly involved in Judge Bentley's decision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a car owner who has experienced the acute annoyance of having my automobile "borrowed" by "joy riders" and in the heat of my anger I thought no punishment sufficient for the thieves. Yet I protest with many others the action of Judge Fay Bentley in committing to the reformatory for six years two hare-brained youngsters who swiped a car.

Does Miss Bentley want to make real criminals of these mischiefs? To require them to serve even one-sixth of their "stretch" would be to invite their permanent resentment against a society which, as expressed by Judge Bentley, has undoubtedly done them an injustice. Whether or not the boys are ever confined to the National Training School, the stigma of the sentence alone is dangerously cruel.

Remember, Miss Bentley, the ballad of W. S. Gilbert's "Mikado:" "My object all sublime I shall achieve in time—to make the punishment fit the crime, the punishment fit the crime!"

WILLIAM A. BELL, JR.

Washington, Jan. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a former worker for years with street boys, so-called, and as a former chief probation officer for some five years, I am especially interested in Judge Bentley's commitment of those two boys to a training school.

I have read Judge Bentley's defense. In that defense she makes a most startling, tacit admission, namely, that she has little or no confidence in the efficacy of the probation system as operated by her own probation officers.

I had expected in Judge Bentley's defense that these boys had repeatedly violated their probation and that, therefore, there was nothing left for her to do but to commit them to an institution as a last resort. Well and good. But this is what she says: "It always has been my practice to grant probation if possible, and especially on a first offense." Please note, if possible, on a first offense.

And this brings me to another point. Why a woman judge for boys of that age? Reared by women, taught by women, now judged by a woman, after having been investigated by women, or the type of men that will serve under a woman, of course there is nothing left but a training school where they might have disciplinary contact with men.

What I should like to see is a kind but just father of boys, a real he-man, presiding over cases of such boys. Perhaps he would not be so helpless with boys in their critical age. And the same goes for the chief probation officer and the probation officers with that type of boys.

BELIEVER IN PROBATION.

Washington, Jan. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is not your attack on Judge Bentley rather premature? In almost every community there is an embryro gang of youthful "delinquents," which term is usually an euphemism for "thieves," though they also, at times, torture or kill small animals, abuse smaller children, and generally harass the community. Some of these boys have been in court a dozen times, to emerge with a reprimand or suspended sentence, and also, in the eyes of their companions, added prestige because they "got away with it." Not infrequently they are of good family.

The real cruelty in the present system may be seen in a picture on another page of this morning's Post. Here are two still youthful, only 22, but they have passed that invisible line of childhood, have become "of age" and may now be subjected, without pity, to the medieval sadism of the police. I know nothing of the merits of this particular case, but I think Judge Bentley's position and record would indicate that an investigation and inquiry, without sentimentalism or recrimination, would have been proper prior to this publicity.

Mrs. ROLLIN E. SMITH.

Ballston, Va., Jan. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Would it be possible to publish all the facts leading up to the sentencing by Judge Bentley of the two high school boys to six years in a reformatory? Is it true that this is the first offense for these boys and that they did not have bad records?

I am sure that there are thousands of mothers in Washington who would like to know the answer to this one question.

No one wishes to judge a public official's action without knowing the facts in a case, and it seems to me that this is one case where a great deal can be accomplished by having all the pertinent facts made public. RUTH MACKIE.

Washington, Jan. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the facts are as printed it is the most unbelievable and by far the most abominable and malicious action by a woman of which I have ever read.

The story becomes even more difficult to believe when one fully appreciates that the utter lack of understanding of, and callousness toward, youth is incorporated in the make-up of Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the District Juvenile Court.

The case should be given national publicity, and every father and mother, every self-respecting person in the land, should consider it his or her duty to arise against Judge Bentley and drive her in disgrace and shame from the position she holds.

I am inclosing herewith $1, which I hope will be augmented by the contributions, however small, of thousands of other persons to be used as a fund to secure justice and vindication for those two boys.

A. R. ROARK.

The Post Impressionist

"As the Sparks Fly Upward."

Post Office, Wednesday.

"IS the economic loss heavy?"

"It's tremendous."

We were talking to the Federal Forest Service. It—in the person of one of its very able representatives—continued:

"During 1933 about 43,889,000 acres of forest land in the United States were swept by fire."

The figures for drought-cursed 1934 haven't yet been assembled. However, the preceding 12 months seem to have provided an average year.

The 43,889,000 include both protected and unprotected lands. The "protected" lands are areas subject to State or Federal supervision. The unprotected aren't. In the latter—of which this country still contains some 190,000,000 acres, mostly privately owned—the greater number of fires occur. But the protected areas are by no means exempt: on the contrary.

We wanted a typical case. John Edwin Hogg wrote of an instance occuring last winter, when five square miles of the protected Angeles National Forest, in Southern California, were destroyed despite the efforts of 4,000 men armed with wet sacks and shovels—the ordinary utensils of the forest-fire fighters:

"After burning for nearly a week with an estimated damage of $2,500,000, this blaze was finally brought under control * * * (Then) a heavy rain fell in the mountain area denuded by the fire. Torrents loaded with silt, boulders and burned debris crashed into the lowland cities like water off a roof, leaving 100 dead, 3,000 homeless, and property damage of $5,000,000."

Mr. Hogg says that only persons who have endured it can realize such fires' "tremendous speed, terrific heat and ghastly ferocity." He explains: "It is suicide to go near one when it is burning up a slope. No attempt can be made to stop it by present methods until the flames sweep the summit of a ridge."

Then the firemen may bring on their wet sacks and shovels and attack as the fire burns somewhat more slowly down the slope. "If the wind is favorable, back-fires may be set to create firebreaks in advance of the main fire." But a change in the breeze and those new fires will add to the horrors of the old! "In one fire alone, 47 amateur fire-fighters were roasted alive" by just such a wind shift.

With 43,889,000 acres burned in a year—with $2,500,000 worth of timber consumed by a single fire—with $5,000,000 lost in the aftermath—and with lives going out like that: what's to be done about it?

Mr. Hogg, whom we quote from Field and Stream, grants that the Federal Forest Service "has done excellent work in developing its system of lookout stations," yet he declares—and he is something of an expert—that the value of much of this work is sacrificed when, a five having started, only the old wet sack and shovel methods are available against it. He says the service is continually submerged by suggestions, but is compelled to reject them all—because there are no funds available to depart from the familiar, and apparently not very efficient, technique of the past.

So Mr. Hogg wants the Army to be used.

He says: "A single aerial bomb carrying 100 pounds of carbon tetrachloride, or any one of a dozen other chemicals which have long been used . . . in smothering fires, might be worth several hundred fire-fighters on the ground. A modern bombing plane can carry two tons of such chemicals. The aviator high in air sees the fire as a whole . . . and he would direct his attack by bomb or spray on the most dangerous part."

Mr. Hogg points out that it would take almost no time for such planes to reach the scene of a fire.

And then Mr. Hogg turns to the artillery:

"Every man who saw service in France knows how devastatingly a battery can lay down a gas-barrage, and there is no dearth of chemical knowledge for developing gas-shells that will smother fire. A modern 5-inch gun has an effective range of about 20 miles and is a very mobile piece of equipment. With a couple of airplanes to do the shell-spotting, artillerymen can throw fire-fighting chemical shells over a couple of ranges of mountains with deadly accuracy."

Now, the Post-Impressionist was "in France" and saw something of what both airplanes and 5-inch guns could do. The Hogg Plan sounded sound to him. But he has had—thank Heaven—no experience in fighting forest fires. So that is why he discussed the matter with the Federal Forest Service.

Well, here is what the Federal Forest Service—though its very able representative aforementioned—replied:

"A few years ago, certain Army officers believed something might be done along the lines Mr. Hogg now suggests. Then experiments were made. But no possibilities were found to justify our hopes."

It's a mighty important matter. It involves a mighty difference of opinion.

We'd like to hear more from Mr. Hogg.

Recovery In England Awaits Stable Dollar

MacDonald's Optimism Justified, But Real Stability Hinges On U. S. Program.

By Edward Acheson.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

London.

"THE memory of the past year is far from saying, 'You have won through,'" Mr. Ramsay MacDonald told Great Britain in his New Year's broadcast, "but it does whisper, 'You are winning through.' And to what have we to win through?"

At this point the prime minister ambled off into unprovocative generalities, leaving orphaned a most intricate and relevant question. On the assumption that England does win through—and there can now be little doubt of that—what is at the other end of the rather grim rainbow?

The answer seems to be "eventually, gold." Gold, or any substitute which can set up an international standard. With one accord, the critics, irrespective of party, join in that chorus.

If not—and if the present British policy is continued, a policy which is conservative both politically and in fact—then there remains to British industry and commerce only a small additional percentage of "recovery." This percentage is measured and limited by the possible increase in trade in the sterling area, an increase which, all agree, will not in itself bring about the dawn of a brighter day. England has already replaced with domestic goods all the imports she dares to replace. Any further extension of this policy will inevitably dangerously raise the internal price level.

* * * *

ON the other hand, she can, and probably will, consolidate her present position, support her 2,000,000 unemployed, and play a waiting game. But that again, merely begs the question by substituting another. What is she waiting for?

The most prevalent platitude of the present situation is that prosperity will never return to England until international trade is restored. Nothing could, I think, be more apparent. But the consequences of this assumption are not always recognized.

International trade will never be restored until the important currencies of the world are stabilized. Naturally; but the pound, it is assumed in England, is overvalued in relation to the dollar and undervalued in relation to the franc. Hence, according to the characteristically British logic, the pound can not be stabilized until either the overvalued franc is adjusted to the dollar by means of devaluation, or the undervalued dollar is brought into alignment with the franc by a rise in the American price level.

So "winning through," in the prime minister's phrase, does not and can not mean an imminent arrival in the land of Canaan. Almost as he spoke, M. Flandin was declaring that France's solution lay, not in inflation, but in a drastic readjustment of the French internal price level. Signor Mussolini, too, appeared to be surer of his lira than he had in weeks past. And in America it seems evident that with so much slack to be taken up in the basic industries, any stimulus given by financial or monetary measures will tend more to restore production than to raise prices of goods produced.

* * * *

EVEN the temporary relief which has been achieved by some of the gold bloc countries by quoting different rates of exchange for different purposes is not available to England. Switzerland and Italy are already employing this method, and it is rumored that France is considering a scheme by which hotels and tourist centers will be able to quote a rate of 100 francs to the pound, instead of 93, the treasury footing the bill for the difference. But England's tourist trade is only a microscopic proportion of her "exports" and the confusion would greatly outweigh the advantages.

Hence, with the gold bloc clinging to gold, and the American price level in little danger of sky-rocketing, the situation has all the earmarks of an impasse. And the prime minister, although not stating the fact explicitly, suggests that it may be all for the best. In fact, his whole attitude radiates sunshine and good-cheer, not unmixed with a touch of complacency. "We are again the first exporting country of the world. * * * The prospect before us at home is stimulating. * * * Everything points to a year of improving trade, rising wages, and increasing employment. * * * What pleases the government most is the mounting demand of the home market. * * * The land is returning to the life of England."

And to some extent this cheery outlook is justified. England is, as a whole, undoubtedly better off than America, than France, or Germany. In comparison with the rest of the world, this sterling group does seem like the permanent repository of what little prosperity there is.

* * * *

ALL of which goes to explain the feeling of security that pervades England. The panic which gripped men's hearts when the country was forced off the gold standard in 1931, has proved wholly unjustified. The national price level has not risen. The joke, thus far, has been on the benighted economists who naively taught when a currency is depreciated, prices rise. The pound, it would seem, leads a charmed life, totally immune from the laws of ordinary moneys. But the fact that the world price level fell with, and partly because of, the fall of the pound is not taken into consideration. "Gold has gone off the pound" is still a very prevalent theory, and no one—except again those unhappy economists—even wonders what will happen when the long-hoped-for prosperity returns and world prices begin to recover.

The premier congratulates himself and his government. He congratulates himself very much as a doctor might whose patient showed signs of pulling through an attack of the flu. But South Wales and the north of England are ominous: if the doctor's patient, when attacked by the flu, was a chronic consumptive, neither his resistance to the flu nor the doctor's rejoicing is going to effect the course of the more fundamental complaint.

Real and substantial recovery in England is dependent on the recovery of the so-called depressed areas. They, in turn, on world trade; world trade on stabilization and, finally, the stabilization of the pound depends, in the last analysis, on the dollar.

England has had one experience with revaluation at too high a level. The burnt child is going to wait, this time, until Mr. Roosevelt has the fire well under control.

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Mr. Roper's Presentation.

SECRETARY ROPER must get right discouraged with his business men. Periodically he brings them out and presents them, but they won't do or say anything to impress themselves upon our minds. We forget them as soon as they are out of sight and some months later when the Secretary presents them again it is as if we had never seen them before.

BARGERON.

That business advisory council of his now—he has had it for a long time, ever since he took over the reins of the Commerce Department, in fact. He presented it to us at the time and one will recall the embarrassment.

"I would like for you to meet my business advisory council," the Secretary said.

And we said: "Howdy do, glad to meetcher."

Then we both just stood there looking at one another, until the Secretary prodded the council, as a fond parent prods its child before company.

"Can't you say something for the gentlemen?" the Secretary asked.

Whereupon the council spoke up and said: "Balance the budget."

* * * *

Of course, we all laughed and agreed that the council was just as cute as it could be, but the plain truth is that the council passed right out of our minds.

It has been that way every time. The secretary is always moving across the room and taking our arm to say: "Come over here and meet my business advisory council." And then when we go over and greet it we find the only conversation they have is "Balance the budget."

It is not in point that this is not a very good thing to say. But we aren't going to balance the budget, so there is nothing in the expression to hold our attention.

* * * *

Just what prompted the secretary to think a few days ago that perhaps it might not be a bad time to introduce the council again is not known. It may be he thought the whirlpool hereabouts had quieted to the extent that the council might make a dent. But it didn't. Although the recurrent introduction was only the other day, we wouldn't recognize the council if we were to run into it on the street.

This time it didn't even say "Balance the budget." It just said it was going to give Mr. Roper some ideas from time to time which he in turn could present to the President.

There is something about the council that keeps it from clicking. One debut after another, but it never catches on. Always a bridesmaid, but never a bride. One can't tell—it lacks personality or something. Maybe it should follow out some of the directions of the newspaper ads. Maybe Blue Belle Soap would turn the trick.

* * * *

And, of course, the council is up against the trend. Thinkers are the vogue this season, men who can say smart, witty and devastating things. There is certainly nothing witty about "Balance the budget." It isn't funny at all.

You can imagine why, under the circumstances, none of us will take the council up and invite it to our parties. It would be a wall-flower among scintillating minds. Why, wisecracks would be popping all around it and to save its life it couldn't open its mouth.

Unfortunately for these gay times the council is too serious. It has never learned to play. It thinks only of business, of reviving industry, of getting the country back on an even keel. We don't want to think of those things.

* * * *

We sort of hope the secretary will keep it around, though. We have a suspicion that when we get through with our splurge we might get some comfort by leaning our head on its shoulders. We will be tired of the brilliant sayings. We will want something substantial.

No End Of Books

Sarah M. Lockwood Chats On Interior Decorating For Those Who Choose Traditional Houses.

By Theodore Hall.

ALDOUS HUXLEY once remarked that learning might be the stuff of life for scholars and philosophers, but that it was a very bad thing indeed for artists. What he meant was the fact that our omniverous age has recorded and brought to hand so many centuries of schools, traditions, and styles that the poor painter or poet is overwhelmed. Too easily, he can know everything else but his own soul. A tradition of all traditions laid out on the counter is no tradition at all.

Jumping nimbly into today's little field—houses and decoration—we find a very similar situation waiting for us. Dozens of luscious, home-praising magazines and hundreds of hortatory books lead us to every style of domestic embellishment from that of Tutankhamen to that of Le Corbusier. Sitting comfortably in the front row of time, the madame of the household can go Directoire because she had a French ancestor, or Queen Anne because she read about Sir Roger de Coverley in boarding school, or New England Colonial because her great-aunt left her a genuine Savery highboy. Reasons as sufficient as those—and they're used every day in the week—give us Spanish villas in Essex County, Mass., Cape Cod cottages in Florida, and Jacobean manor-houses in Oklahoma.

Yet when you think about it, why not?

* * * *

It's entirely too naive to hold up this sort of thing as an absurdity. When you expect a neatly assorted and apportioned world, it's, of course, a bit odd to find a gentleman of Andalusian tastes making his home in Essex County. But, with all this ideal neatness overboard, he does. And it is not improbable that a lady with Barnstable in her blood likes Tampa for the sun. And as for our Tulsa oil baron, he might be showing shrewder instinct than we think when he decks himself out in a style which Elizabethan swashbuckling made possible for the reign of the first James.

You can't quarrel with temperament in a country as broad and all-inclusive as ours. All you can hope, as a sensitive-eyed passerby, is that the house keep to its idiom. As the fashioner of your own house, all you can pray for is good advice when you plunge into periods.

* * * *

The books may be thick on the decorating shelf, but they must make room for a sensible and graciously spoken newcomer. Sarah M. Lockwood's "Decoration: Past, Present and Future" (Doubleday Doran, $3.50) runs through the historical periods of housing and furniture, ably describes the salient features of each, and gives the reader a very durable impression of what has proved characteristic and valuable in decorating.

More, she takes us room by room through the various houses whose traditions still exist among us—Jacobean and Georgian, Southern mansion and New England manor, Dutch Colonial, French and Italian, etc.—and shows us, plainly and explicitly, their inner harmony. Few people who know that they want a traditional house could ask for a better guide.

There might have been more illustrations—the ones here are but incidental decoration, though suggestive—but books of pictures are near at hand and most of them pretty well need the kind of wise summing up which Mrs. Lockwood provides.

* * * *

Now, for a lady steeped in Louis Quinze and Sheraton, Mrs. Lockwood is surprisingly kind to "modern" decoration. She does say that "its mechanical efficiency in the home fills us with a curious sense of frustration" and she remarks that she can not imagine "our children's children cherishing Grandfather's old chromium tubing chair."

But she sees that "modern decoration will stand or fall on the age-old acid test; just so far as it fulfills its purpose it will take root and live because it must, and the artificialities will wither and slough off; then the good will remain to take its place beside the other 'modern improvements' that have stood the test of time and become what we call a tradition."

Which, though mildly put, is undeniable. I should like her to have been a little more tart.

* * * *

For the "modern" school calls all this reminiscent care for Hepplewhite chairs and Colonial fireplaces the most utter and sentimental bosh. "Come out of your romantic retreats," they cry, "and live in your age!"

I can not help thinking what happened, a winter or two ago, to some "functional" houses up in the Connecticut hills. They had every electrical and mechanical device which science could offer; their very decoration proclaimed the fact that they stood at the forefront of time. Then an irreverent blizzard descended, tore down some wires and snowed up the roads.

For a week the owners of those houses had no light—can you imagine a candle in a "modern" house? They had no hot food—even a gas range is anathema to the pure "modernist." Far the worst of all, they had no heat. There were all the trees in the county outside, and not a fireplace within. Less than 50 miles from the metropolis of material civilization, these adherents of "modernism" faced infinitely worse hardship than did the Pilgrims during their first winter on the Plymouth Colony coast.

The classic definition of the "modern" house, one remembers with a start, is Le Corbusier's famous phrase—"a machine for living."

Cornell's Shakespeare

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

Part III

KATHARINE CORNELL in her first New York appearance in Shakespeare was as near perfection as it is humanly possible to be. She was girlish, she was romantic, she was passionate—with an intimate playfulness. In scenes of tragedy and grief she was equally admirable. Furthermore, her voice could be heard in every part of the theater.

Not so much can be said for Basil Rathbone, who played Romeo. Many of his lines were inaudible, and I thought he was a little lacking in virility. Many people suppose that because Romeo was a lover he must, therefore, have been effeminate. Exactly the contrary is true. Romeo kills Tybalt, almost the best swordsman in Italy, and later he kills Paris, a young and active gentleman.

* * * *

Mr. Brian Aherne gave a spectacular and magnificent performance of Mercutio, and was as dashing and debonair as one could wish. Tabalt was perhaps made too sinister. After all, he is simply obsessed with the honor of the House of Capulet. Many in the audience may have wondered at what looked like a three days' growth of beard on his chin, but this was truly in accordance with the style of the smart set in those days. In "King Henry IV," Hotspur describes what the man will wear, and he says of a young dandy: "And his chin new reaped showed like a stubble-field at harvest home."

* * * *

One of the most splendid performances of the evening was Edith Evans as the nurse. There is no fault to be found with anything she did—both in scenes of humor and scenes of tragedy. In the final scene of the play, the death of the lovers, the stage settings were most impressive, and I was also interested to observe that Romeo died before Juliet woke up, which is in accordance with the best Shakespearean tradition. I have seen it done, however, in a fashion so melodramatic as to be horrible. Romeo takes the poison and Juliet wakes up, imagining her troubles are over. They actually walk around the tomb before he dies.

The part of the priest, Friar Laurence, was done superbly by Charles Waldron, whom every one will remember as the father in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

The stage settings throughout the play were gorgeous. It was the most sumptuous performance of Shakespeare that I have seen since Henry Irving's "Merchant of Venice." At the end Katharine Cornell and her company were called before the curtain so many times that I lost count. She proved her right to be regarded as America's first living actress.

World Sees Recovery Returning To America

English Question Ability To Manage New Obligations; New Deal Combats 'Isms.'

By Elliott Thurston.

VISITORS from other countries who come over here to pass often too hasty judgment upon the American scene appear to be agreed upon three large generalizations. The first is that the United States is not so badly off as they had supposed from most of what they had read or heard. Compared with conditions in Russia, Germany, Austria, Italy and other continental countries, they remark, the United States is prosperous. It is still difficult to find a parking place in Main street.

Our unemployment problem is relatively less than that of most continental countries, though we have no adequate knowledge of our own unemployment and relief problem. We do know approximately how many are on relief rolls, how much the Government has been spending and proposes to spend for direct and indirect relief.

However, it is notable that in the extensive and able report of the committee on economic security there is no estimate of the amount now being spent by the country as a whole for care of the unemployed, the sick, destitute and aged. There is no way of comparing, for instance, the huge amounts proposed for unemployment and health insurance and for pensions with what normally comes out of the public and private purse for support of those without means of support.

It may be that the contemplated costs involved in the so-called social security program, which is to be under the direction and control of the Government, may not much exceed what would normally be spent by local public and private agencies for the same general purposes.

* * * *

IN OTHER words, no reliable figures have been brought forth to make possible a comparison between the normal bill of the country for relief of all kinds and the proposed bill. It is not possible to form an adequate idea of the effects on American economy, let alone the political structure. For while the States are being prompted to enact their own social security laws, the Government remains the overlord and master, the custodian and distributor of the funds.

The social security report notes that "no even reasonably complete data are available regarding the means of support of aged persons, and the number in receipt of some form of public charity is not definitely known." However, for old-age pensions alone, under what is admittedly the most conservative of the various proposals considered—certainly conservative compared with the Huey Long and Townsend plans—the report frankly foresees enormous future costs.

It may be argued that the future can take care of itself, but surely the problem should be fully understood and weighed now before embarking upon what might in time prove ruinous. The report estimates that even on a basis of requiring prospective beneficiaries of annuities to contribute in part, the Government would have to make heavy contributions beginning in 1965, and reaching "a maximum of above $1,400,000,000 per year by 1980."

* * * *

THIS leads up to a second generalization: doubt of whether, under existing political processes in this country, Government is capable of coping with the vast new controls and responsibilities which it is assuming, not merely in imposing and managing social security, but in undertaking to plan and manage currency, credit, banking (the basic problems of which remain untouched and unsolved), agriculture, industry and other affairs which have previously been left entirely or largely to private or local responsibility—if not to chance. English visitors, in particular, wonder how our political system can cope with such great affairs when it is dominated by typical American politics—by the spoils system. They conclude that unless we introduce some continuity into administration of both foreign and domestic policy, unless we establish a far broader civil service than politics has permitted up to this time, these vast new affairs of state can not be managed with much hope of success.

Presumably the country would not have so generally applauded the Supreme Court's objection to blanket assignment of congressional policy-making authority (in the "hot oil" case) were it not for the widespread fear that politicians, spoilsmen, or at least novices in public service, would get control of vast powers to act and to spend—powers that could only be exercised safely for the Nation by the most experienced and competent authority.

The New Deal has undoubtedly lured into public service an extraordinary number of able, practical, trained men. Yet Mr. Farley, the candid spoilsman, still fills many highly important administrative jobs. The best effort of nonpolitical administrators are repeatedly being thwarted by the spoilsmen—by lack of a trained and adequate Civil Service.

Finally, the visitor from other lands concludes that whatever the perils of the New Deal experiment, it is essentially a stand, and perhaps a last stand, against unwanted "isms," which would end or change beyond recognition democratic institutions and ideals, American traditions and "liberties." Rather, seeing many compromises with the old, many limitations, at least, put upon the formerly free play of economic, social and political forces in this country, the visitor decides that it will be a long time before the United States finds its way out—and its place in the always new world.

Many Going To Gala Ball In New York

Society Here Interested in Beaux Arts Event February 1.

The Historical Spectacle, "George III Regrets," to Be Presented.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The interest of Capital society in the Beaux Arts Ball to be held February 1 at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City is increasing as plans near completion. A number of Washingtonians will attend the pageant. Among those who will represent prominent characters are Mrs. Alexander Cochrane Forbes, the former "Sunny" Robbins, daughter of the United States Minister to Canada and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who will go as the Duchess of Leeds. Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt will be the Duchess of Kent, of the days of George III, and Mrs. Tuckerman Draper will be Lady Hertford.

The pageant will show the Prince Regent, later George IV, giving one of his many lavish entertainments at Carlton House, London, to which he has invited a large number of distinguished guests to witness a Greek comedy. After the play a fanfare of bugles is heard in the distance and then enters the triumphant Duke of Wellington and his staff, preceded by a large band of Highland pipers. They bring to the prince the battle-torn flags and trophies of their victory at Waterloo.

A patriotic prelude arranged by Mr. Kenneth M. Murchison, formerly of Washington, now of New York, will precede the pageant which will begin at midnight. It will be based on airs of the early nineteenth century. During the spectacle the music will be lively, consisting of early English dances. For the Greek play presented before the court, the music will be performed on harps only.

Mrs. Forbes and other members of society who are to take part in the pageant or portray members of the court are rehearsing almost every day under the direction of Mr. Christopher LaForge, chairman of the executive committee and author of the scenario for "George III Regrets," the historical spectacle of the regency in Great Britain which will make this year's Beaux Arts ball one of the most brilliant yet seen.

Opera Settings For 'La Traviata' Will Be Modern

Orchestra Will Include More Than 50 Members of National Symphony.

Max Rabinoff, operatic impresario, will present his Cosmopolitan Opera Association, of New York, in the first opera ever to be presented at Constitution Hall Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock in Verdi's "La Traviata."

Mr. Rabinoff will have novel drapes and modernistic ideas expressed in the setting for this performance. The lighting effects are the latest ideas along that line, too. The acting qualities of the singers, as well as their vocal abilities, will be stressed and there will even be a corps de ballet, which is unusual in this opera.

The prima donna, Edis de Philippe, is a native of New York. Moreover, she has done all her studying in this country. Armand Tokatyan, the tenor, is a favorite artist heard here previously with the Metropolitan Opera Company. Jean Fardulli, who sings the third principal role, is a young "Greek god of song," who will make his debut locally at this time.

The ballet, which will appear in the famous gambling scene, is headed by George Chaffee, Joyce Coles and Edith Donnan.

The orchestra will include more than 50 members of Washington's National Symphony Orchestra.

Western Influence Opens Persia to Tourist Trade

Western influence, which has intertwined the Eastern Mediterranean coastal cities and challenged the complacency of ancient modes in central Persia, is now spreading eastward to the borderlands of Afghanistan, according to J. L. McCormack, district director of the American Export Lines.

At recurring intervals, the Persian Gulf becomes a focus of interest throughout the world, and today is in its most stirring transition, believes Mr. McCormack, who views the new attitude of mind and transportation development as opening up a fresh domain for tourist travel.

"Persia is becoming conscious of the economic advantages derived from visitors, and a tour may now be made with the comforts and amenities of modern travel facilities," he pointed out.

A Hair Lotion For Children On Sale Here

Product of Famous Group Cleanses the Scalp Antiseptically.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

PROUD parents, who beam with joy at the sight of Junior's golden clusters of curls, little realize that 20 or 30 years from now he might be a rotund gentleman with a bald pate.

And how sad it is to see an elderly woman looking lovingly and wistfully at her gray and straggly haired daughter and say, "She used to a beauty."

If parents years ago had known more about the scientific care of children's hair there would be fewer bald heads and premature gray hair. If parents today would take advantage of the many splendid means to insure the health of their children's scalp and hair, these children in later life would have cause to be thankful.

Few hair specialists have gone more intensively into the problem of children's hair care than a famous group that sells many of its products in Washington. Only recently they created a child's hair lotion, which is available in bottles for little boys and girls.

This preparation, sold at a downtown store, antiseptically cleanses the scalp and hair between shampoos. It's a big help, too, in preventing the hair from flying out and upward.

Costume Jewelry on Sale.

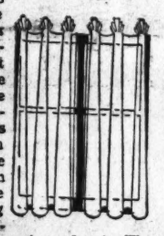
Costume jewelry carefully selected for certain frocks does its bit toward adding chic. Take for instance an ordinary dark dress of which you're growing tired. Try dressing this up with a couple of clips and wearing a bracelet to match. You'll find there's a big difference.

For those who are interested in costume jewelry the present sale in an F street shop offers a big opportunity. Here you can buy two pieces for the price of one—and the price is $1.

There is an unusually large assortment to choose from, including earrings, necklaces, clips, brooches and bracelets.

New Cellophane Drapes.

One of the most amazing and at the same time attractive innovations in the field of home decorating is cellophane for drapes.



Don't try to picture the drapes! It's practically impossible. But do go and see them. They are made of a material which is a combination of cellophane and cotton mesh. The glimmering strands of cellophane are woven in and out. The threads make a checkered background. When they hang at a window they literally gleam and shimmer and give a rich and scintillating effect.

These drapes come in alluring shades, there being canary yellow, silvery green, and a darker bluish green, an eggshell which verges on white, a dusky golden brown, and a strange lovely shade of blue.

Two-in-One Buys.

Any shopper likes a two-and-one buy, and anyone with an eye for attractive house ornaments and a nose for intriguing scents will be delighted with the odd-shaped vases and cookie jars filled with fine bath salts which are on sale in an F street shop.

When these items first appeared on display they sold for $1, but now during a January sale they cost only 50 cents.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

White Cells as Defense Troops.

THE importance of the red blood cells to heal is fairly well understood. The functions of the white cells, or leucocytes, on the other hand, are not so clear. Nevertheless the white cells play as significant a role as do the red cells. They must be maintained in a definite ratio and total somewhere between five and ten thousand per cubic millimeter of blood.

The white cells constitute the body's army of defense and there are several sorts or types. They actually swallow and destroy bacteria found in the tissues and the blood. In addition they neutralize to some extent the poison given off by bacteria anywhere in the body.

In some infections the gravity of the disease may be measured by the response of the white cells. For example, in appendicitis, as in most infections, the white cell count is usually in direct proportion not only to the severity of the infection but to the reserve power of the body. As a rule the leucocytes mobilize before symptoms become marked. In other words, the response of the white cell army is more prompt than the other signs of disease.

When the physician makes a count of the white blood cells he is measuring one of the powerful defensive forces of the body. Should he find these cells high in number he will know that infection exists somewhere and he will hunt until he finds it.

Women's Political Future Discourages Mrs. Norton

Can See No Sign They Are Abandoning 'Academic Attitude.'

This is the third of a series on women in Congress.

REPRESENTATIVE MARY T. NORTON (Democrat), New Jersey, ranking woman member of Congress, is frankly discouraged about woman's place in politics.

"You'll never see a dozen women in Congress in our time," she darkly prophesied yesterday, "unless all the different women's clubs who are standing on the outside looking in, translate their theories into practical action.

"In the last election, the greatest landslide in the history of the country, fewer women were elected than in any in recent years. The reason was that men no longer have any fear of the 'woman vote,' and realize that women are not making the fight for good government that the men thought they would make when women were given the vote."

A review of her own peculiar local-national capacity in Congress, through which she sees the situation in the little and in the large simultaneously, resulted in this somewhat despairing cry from Mrs. Norton.

As chairman of the House District Committee, she's called "Mayor of Washington," and has all the woes of the Capital City piled upon her desk. And ten years' experience in Congress has given her a grasp of national problems.

She said she had lived to see repeal, for which she long fought, go over. With a radiant face, she added that she expected to see welfare legislation, which would otherwise have waited another generation, enacted this session under the impetus of economic conditions to which she credited repeal.

But she sadly concluded that no amount of studying the present situation or straining her eyes hopefully toward the horizon had enabled her to detect a sign that the women of this country were shaking off their "academic attitude."

Dark-haired, dark-eyed, smooth-skinned Mrs. Norton told how much her own exceedingly active career had meant to her. She is dressing in mourning these days for her husband, who died last summer. Simultaneously she suffered the shock of the deaths of other relatives in an auto accident. For weeks she was ill. Friends cautioned her against assuming the strain of the campaign. But that campaign restored her.

"It's a peculiar thing," she said, "how such concentrated activity can lift one out of one's own griefs."

Right now she is concentrating on a crime study of the Capital City, which she hopes will result in curbing legislation before the session ends.

"It is startling to learn there are 2½ times as many murders in proportion to population in Washington than in New York," she said, "and that there is many times as much crime here in proportion to population than Chicago."

Women voters are too academic in their use of the ballot believes Representative Mary T. Norton from New Jersey, above.

What TODAY Means

"Aquarius."

IF JANUARY 23 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

This January 23 is a bad day on which to attempt to force issues. Bluff and "four-flushing" will probably meet with exposure, so those trying it will be greatly embarrassed. This should be a very auspicious day for investors to seek conservative investments, or to lend money if their loans are properly secured by the right type of collateral. Business, as a whole, should inspire a better feeling of confidence which is likely to be reflected by increased activity. It is advisable to abstain from fault-finding on this date is harmonious conditions are desired.

HERE IS A DRESS for every day, workaday wear, cut as becomingly as an afternoon gown. The gored skirt, the shaped yoke below the belt, and the soft blouse section do their slenderizing job well—but inconspicuously. Because the lines of this one-piece dress are so very flattering, a long-sleeved version is also included in the pattern envelope.

This pattern is cut in sizes 36 to 48. Size 40 requires 3⅝ yards of 35-inch fabric, and ⅛ yard for the jabot.

Mural Painter Here for Session On Cure of War

Made Sketches of Leaders at Three Assemblies in Geneva.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

HOW ANYBODY could be a spectator at the League of Nations and object to the United States becoming a member is beyond the comprehension of Miss Violet Oakley, widely known mural painter, of Philadelphia.

Miss Oakley, who attended three successive assemblies in Geneva, where she sketched many leaders "in action," is now in Washington to attend the conference on the cause and cure of war.

Her extensive study of the principles underlying the league, her association with outstanding figures at Geneva, and her observation of the manner in which arbitrations are effected has convinced her the United States not only should adhere to the World Court but should become a full-fledged member of the League of Nations.

Helpless Without U. S.

"The majority of those who favor adherence to the World Court undoubtedly consider it a step toward league membership," she said. "As I see it, little can be accomplished in regard to world peace unless the United States does enter the league."

"Would United States membership in the league result in international disarmament?" Miss Oakley was asked.

"Eventually—yes," she said. "When there is a common court of arbitration, war outlaws itself, becomes a crime. Surely the time has come when war should be placed in that category; particularly so when we consider that because two people were murdered, 10,000,000 soldiers were sacrificed in a world war. It seems it is high time the world recognized war as nothing else than crime."

In this connection Miss Oakley pointed out that up to now the League of Nations had been decidedly hampered by not knowing how the United States would respond to its decisions. If the United States were a part of it, she explained, matters would be greatly simplified and international arbitrations could be carried on more satisfactorily.

Says Prejudices Must Go.

She mentioned, also, that membership in the league could never be accomplished by the United States until old prejudices against "foreign entanglements" were broken down.

"When anything different is brought about, old prejudices must be dissolved. We must remember that at one time many of the States were as opposed to a Federal court as many nations are now evidently opposed to joining the World Court. It seems, however, in the light of the progress of the peace movement, United States adherence to the World Court and entrance into the League of Nations is inevitable. If this is true, it means all nations, after a time, will shed armament just as the serpent sheds its skin."

Miss Oakley feels that of all States Pennsylvania should be the leader in the movement for peace (by way of the League of Nations), because its founder, William Penn, was a "pacifist in the truest sense of the word."

"His plan for peace, published in 1693, included a provision for an assembly of representatives from different countries—a sort of league of nations," she said. "He believed disputes could be settled by arbitration exclusively, and it was this method he used in dealing with the Indians. His success was proof enough of its effectiveness."

Miss Oakley pointed out that the Quakers settled in Pennsylvania knowing they were almost surrounded by savage tribes, without arming themselves against possible encounters with the Indians.

A Triumph of Law.

"They were unarmed, because they trusted their security of justice—according to Penn's idea," she said. "In my opinion, man has often trusted to his own arm, to his own undoing."

Miss Oakley regards the League of Nations, not only as the materialization of William Penn's dream, but as the triumph of law. Bearing out this, she has compiled a portfolio of plates of a number of her murals and sketches. Handsomely bound in tan leather and lettered in gold, the portfolio—entitled "Law Triumphant"—is divided into two parts. The first, called "The Opening of the Book of Law," contains plates of the murals Miss Oakley designed and executed for the Supreme Court rooms in Pennsylvania. The series is a synthesis of law from the beginning of time through the establishment of the United States Supreme Court.

The other part of the portfolio is devoted to "The Miracle of Geneva" and is made up of a number of sketches of delegates to the League of Nations, representatives of the secretariat, and visitors to the Assembly in 1927, 1928 and 1929.

Sketched Briand From Gallery.

Some of the sketches, Miss Oakley explained, were done from the gallery while the delegates were speaking, others were made at council meetings, and still others were drawn while the subjects posed.

One of the most interesting of all the sketches is that of the French statesman, Aristide Briand, whom Miss Oakley sketched while he was speaking by observing him through opera glasses from the gallery. Other prominent men and women who appear in her portfolio include Ramsay MacDonald, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Dean William Ralph Inge, President Thomas Massaryk, Dame Rachel Crowdy, Miss Sarah Wambaugh, Mme. Tilma Heinzel and Mme. Olga Ravelliod.

U. S. Membership in League of Nations Would Lead To World Disarmament, Violet Oakley Believes

(Copyright by Violet Oakley.)

Among the visitors sketched at the League of Nations by Miss Violet Oakley, noted artist, was Mrs. Frank Day Tuttle, prominent advocate of the peace movement. Formerly chairman of the League of Nations Union, Mrs. Tuttle has written a number of books on the peace movement.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Will you please send me the name and address of the lady who was asking your advice in Sunday's column, and who signed herself "Dorothy?" Inclosed you will find a stamped and addressed envelope. I would like very much to get in touch with her. Sincerely,

MRS. J. F. B.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. J. F. B.: It is the policy of this column not to divulge the name and address of correspondents, when submitted, without permission of the writer. If "Dorothy," seeing your request, wishes to communicate with you, and will grant me permission to do so, I shall be glad to send you her name and address. Otherwise, I can not in fairness to her comply with your petition.

M. H.

Volunteer Social Work.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I can not tell you how much I appreciate the mention you have given the work of our Volunteer Workers' Bureau of the Washington Council of Social Agencies.

• • • •

I'm hoping you will have reason to refer to the Volunteer Bureau again, and so I am writing to explain it a little more clearly.

• • • •

The Bureau is not a branch of the Y. W. C. A. activity, but is under the Council of Social Agencies. We are located in the Y. W. C. A. building because we could not have adequate quarters in the Council building at 1101 M street, northwest; and also because the Y. W. C. A. building is more convenient for most of the persons who wish to volunteer.

• • • •

Mrs. John Jay O'Connor is chairman of the volunteer committee. I am the placement secretary and Mrs. Wilfred Goodwyn is my assistant. Mrs. Robert Coe does the typing and filing for the bureau. We are all volunteers.

• • • •

Do not hesitate to send us anyone who wants to do volunteer work, as we can place almost any capable person. There are 65 agencies in the council and they represent every type of welfare work that is being done in Washington. Gratefully yours, (MRS.) RUTH B. MONTGOMERY.

DEAR MRS. MONTGOMERY: It is a pleasure to recommend such an organization as yours to the attention of persons earnestly seeking constructive use of leisure time and idle energies. The merit of the Volunteer Bureau speaks for itself in that, through no overtures of its staff members, facts concerning the work inevitably found their way into print. I shall be glad to continue to give a reminder of it's existence to those I think would be actively interested.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Chocolate Sponge Is Perfect For Adults as Well as Children

Dessert Is Never Too Elaborate for the Family Meal and Always Appropriate for Company Dinners or After Bridge Refreshments.

By Dorothea Duncan.

CHOCOLATE sponge—every housewife take the tip. Chocolate desserts are always popular, but this particular one, soft, spongy and of that melt-in-the mouth quality, will take your family by storm and cause a small sensation if there happens to be guests present. It is the kind of dessert that is perfect for children as well as adults. It is never too elaborate for the homey, family meal and always appropriate for company dinners or after bridge refreshments.

It is a distinct pleasure to find a really good general purpose dessert that can be made from the foods usually found on the pantry shelf and in the refrigerator. Chocolate sponge for dinner can be a quick decision, because nine times out of ten you won't have to stir outside of the house to round up the ingredients. It isn't unusual ingredients that make this dessert what it is, but rather the manner in which the commonplace ones are combined that gives it its charm.

If you haven't a chocolate sponge in your recipe file, don't let this one slip by without clipping it, and be sure to give it a try:

1½ squares unsweetened chocolate
4 egg yolks, beaten slightly
1 package gelatin, strawberry flavor
Shake of powdered cinnamon
4 egg whites, beaten stiff
¼ cup sugar
1¾ cups milk, scalded
Shake of salt
½ teaspoonful vanilla.

Cut chocolate in pieces, add half the sugar and melt over hot water. Stir to make smooth. Mix rest of sugar with beaten yolks. Pour scalding milk over this, stirring while pouring. Cook in double boiler to a smooth cream, stirring constantly. Add a little at a time to chocolate mixture and stir. Pour at once over gelatin, and place in a pan of hot water and stir until dissolved. When cold and slightly thickened, add salt, cinnamon and vanilla. Beat with rotary egg beater until consistency of whipped cream. Fold in egg whites. Turn into molds. Chill until firm. Serves six.

When a more elaborate dessert is desired, mold in a ring shape. Turn out on a platter and fill the center with sweetened whipped cream topped with shaved chocolate.

Suggested Dinner Menu for Today.

Half Grapefruit
Baked Stuffed Green Peppers
Mashed Potatoes
Creamed Corn
Lettuce with Russian Dressing
Bread and Butter
Chocolate Sponge
Coffee Milk (for children)

Baked stuffed peppers always form a delicious combination of meat and vegetables. Leftovers can be combined for the stuffing of the peppers to form a dish with character and originality, and their greatest appeal to the housewife is their nominal cost.

Baked Stuffed Peppers.

Cut off the tops of the peppers or cut them in two, lengthwise, and remove the inner fiber and seeds. Drop into boiling water, remove from the fire and let stand 10 to 12 minutes, then drain.

Meat Stuffing.

½ onion
1¼ cups cooked meat (veal, chicken or ham)
1 tablespoon fat
1 cup water or stock
1½ cups moistened bread crumbs
Salt and pepper.

Mix minced, cooked meat with moistened bread crumbs, salt, pepper, melted fat and the onion, grated. Stuff the peppers with this mixture and stand them in a dripping pan. Add water or stock. Bake in a moderate oven (350-375 degrees F.), basting frequently. Cooked rice may be used instead of the bread crumbs. If this is used the menu may be more attractive if a green vegetable is substituted for the potatoes.

This amount of stuffing will fill six peppers.

WHAT A FOOL I WAS TO LET FAT RUIN MY LIFE

But I'm So Happy I Got Back My Figure Before It Was Too Late

When I think of the fun I've missed on account of my fat I could weep. Now that I've got my slender figure back and people invite me to go places, I wonder why I was such a dunce as to resign myself for so many years to being overweight.

It's simply that I was on the wrong track—I know now that dieting and exercise and physics don't help much if your body lacks that important element that keeps your food from turning into all fat.

This is the kind of story that thousands who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you. Marmola is really a godsend because it sets a proven reducing principle to work in the body without disturbing one's diet or other normal habits. Marmola contains the element that physicians recommend for obesity.

If everything you eat goes to fat, it indicates that your body lacks an important element. That is the secret of Marmola—it supplies the element your body needs, to counteract all of your food turning into fat.

After a few days of taking Marmola you begin to notice the amazing results—all that horrid, unsightly fat beginning to disappear.

Since 1907, more than 20 million packages have been purchased—striking evidence of its success. Marmola is prepared in easy tablet form by one of the leading medical laboratories in America.

Why wait—start today! You will soon know why there are so many Marmola enthusiasts. When your figure is where you want it, stop using Marmola. It's as easy—and as simple as that!

Marmola is on sale at all dealers.

Hauptmann Takes Stand Tomorrow; 2 Call Him Sourland Prowler.

him, and the spectators joined him.

"Did you know all the carpenters who built Col. Lindbergh's house?"

"No, I only knew one of them."

The Jurors Smile.

Then there were some more people around the Sourland Mountains whose faces you couldn't recognize. Do you want to change your previous testimony on that point?"

"Yes, I do."

It went on that way for half an hour until even the jury was smiling at Whited's attempts to shake off his tormenter. Occasionally the witness, who admitted he couldn't read well enough to "get much out of the papers," showed flashes of the simple dignity that unschooled people who live close to the soil seem to have as their heritage. One such occasion was when Fisher asked him how he remembered that all this happened in February, 1932.

"I lost my sister that month," Whited replied, and nobody laughed.

Rossiter's testimony was brief. He said he saw Hauptmann on Highway No. 31 standing beside a car that had gone off the road. He would not remember much about the car, but he got a good look at its owner.

"What sort of a hat was he wearing?"

"A gray slouch hat."

"You stayed there for a while?"

"Yes."

U. S. Agent Recalled.

Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, began today to live up to his reputation as a man who can pull rabbits out of a hat.

What he turned up in court today may amount to nothing, but there is a chance that it may save the life of Bruno Hauptmann.

Thomas Sisk, of the Division of Investigation, Department of Justice, was on the witness stand giving routine testimony about how Hauptmann was tracked down in the Bronx. Reilly turned his back on him, and then whirled and pumped this question at him:

"Do you know that a plaster cast was made of a footprint in St. Raymond's Cemetery after Dr. Condon paid the ransom?"

Attorney General David T. Wilentz sprang to his feet, shouting objections to the question. The court ordered the witness to answer. Sisk said such a cast had been made by Dr. John F. Condon and his son-in-law, Ralph Hacker. Sisk, surprised at the question, said the report was in his New York files and that he could not make it public without the consent of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

"Very well," Reilly said. "I will recall this gentleman as a defense witness. I also will get in touch with Washington immediately and ask the Attorney General's permission to produce this report in the interest of justice."

Cummings Agrees.

Then he scribbled this telegram to Attorney General Cummings:

"Department of Justice Agent Sisk, on the stand today in the Hauptmann trial, gave testimoney regarding a footprint taken in St. Raymond's Cemetery. We have asked for the original report, but Sisk says he can not produce same without your permission. Will you, in the interest of justice and a fair trial, instruct him to produce the report at once?"

Promptly the answer came back from the Department of Justice that Sisk has been ordered to produce the report.

The point of it all is this:

Hauptmann wears a No. 9 shoe. If Reilly can show that this footprint left on a fresh grave in the cemetery, near where the ransom money was passed, was made by a man who wore anything except a No. 9 shoe, he can cast grave doubt on Hauptmann's guilt. After all, Reilly once won an acquittal for a man accused of murder by proving that a blade was an inch and a half wide whereas the fatal wound was only three-quarters of an inch wide.

Sisk will come back to the witness stand some time after the prosecution rests its case.

Ladder Admitted.

Arthur Koehler, Department of Agriculture wood expert, will be the State's final witness. He will attempt to trace the wood used in the ladder found outside the Lindbergh home right up to Hauptmann's front door in the Bronx.

The groundwork for Koehler's testimony was laid today when prosecution got the rude ladder, which rested against the courtroom wall, admitted as evidence. The defense bitterly contended that police had taken the ladder apart in the course of their investigations. Justice Thomas W. Trenchard ruled that the ladder should be admitted as evidence, which means that the court now concedes that this particular ladder was the one placed against the wall of the Lindbergh home on the night of the kidnaping.

Near the end of today's session the State began to try to prove that it could trace the lumber used in the ladder to Hauptmann. One witness testified that on December 29, 1931—about two months before the kidnaping—Hauptmann purchased $9.32 worth of lumber from the Great National Millwork and Lumber Company, in the Bronx.

Another witness said that he had shipped the lumber from South Carolina to the Bronx firm.

Then Max Rauch, Hauptmann's landlord, swore that a piece of wood had been ripped out of the Hauptmann attic. The State will attempt to prove that Hauptmann used that wood in building the ladder.

U. S. Sailor Buried at Sea.

Cobh, Ireland, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—The captain of the liner Washington on arrival today reported Michael Murphy, an American sailor, was buried at sea yesterday. He fell to the deck while working aloft in a gale Saturday.

2 Swear They Saw Hauptmann Reconnoitering Sourland Area

Woodsman Is Confused by Questioning of Defense.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22 (AP).—Lewis J. Bornmann, State police detective, was the first witness called today in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, charged with the kidnap murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz produced a chisel and the witness said he found it at the Lindbergh estate, near where the ladder was picked up early in the morning after the kidnaping, March 2, 1932.

"We offer the chisel in evidence," Wilentz said.

Associate Defense Counsel Frederick A. Pope objected, but Justice Trenchard admitted it.

Wilentz directed the witness' attention to the ladder upright which had been cut through for purposes of wood analysis and investigation.

The detective said he himself had sawed the upright through at the State police headquarters.

Q. So, detective, these three sections of the ladder are the same as when it was found, with exception of the numbers put on and the cuts made in the investigation?—A. The same.

Wilentz then offered the ladder in evidence. Previous attempts had been unsuccessful. After argument, it was admitted.

Pope took the trooper-detective for cross-examination. He was told that after the ladder was found on the Lindbergh estate, it was placed in the custody of Trooper Frank Kelly, fingerprint and identification expert.

Q. Did Dr. Hudson examine the ladder?—A. I have no knowledge of it.

Q. Do you know Dr. Hudson?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was it examined for fingerprints?—A. I have no knowledge of that. I turned it over to Trooper Kelly.

Sisk Recalled to Stand.

Wilentz interrupted to say Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, wanted an opportunity to cross-examine Thomas H. Sisk, Federal agent, who participated in Hauptmann's arrest.

Sisk, the boyish-looking Federal agent at whom Hauptmann yelled, "Mister, you are lying" last week, took the stand.

Reilly asked him if he had produced confidential Department of Justice reports on the case. The witness nodded in the affirmative.

Reilly, walking slowly toward the witness, carrying a sheaf of papers, began questioning him on his entrance in the case and cooperation of Federal, New York and New Jersey authorities.

Sisk said copies of reports of Federal activities were sent to Col. Schwarzkopf.

Q. During the time of the payment of the ransom money and the arrest of Hauptmann did you visit every bank in Greater New York and Westchester?—A. We visited banks with New Jersey State police and the New York police at various times.

Q. When was the identification made of the $20-bill in Hauptmann's wallet?—A. That was made within a few minutes after it was taken from him after the arrest by a detective.

Q. Did you ever talk to Dr. Condon (ransom intermediary) about the ransom money?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever find the ransom money box?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever have Dr. Condon imitate the voice of "John" and record it on victrola records?—A. We did. It was on one record. We have it in Washington.

Plaster Cast of Foot.

Q. When did you come into the case?—A. November, 1933.

Q. Were you at the home of Hauptmann the night before the arrest?—A. I was.

Q. Weren't there other police there, watching?—A. Yes.

Q. Was Hauptmann home that night?—A. I don't know of my own knowledge.

Q. Now isn't it a fact, Mr. Sisk, that a plaster cast of the foot of the man who collected the ransom was taken by some one?—A. I wasn't working on the case at the time.

Q. Wasn't that cast made and taken by Dr. Condon's son-in-law?—A. I learned that a cast of a footprint was taken, but there is no positive connection between that and the man who took the ransom. It was taken on a fresh grave near a retaining wall about 15 or 20 feet from the point where Dr. Condon said he turned the money over in St. Raymond's Cemetery.

Reilly asked Sisk where the report was which dealt with the plaster cast.

"In my New York office."

Q. Can you bring it here?—A. We have a ruling in our department that all our reports are the property of the Attorney General of the United States.

Sisk explained that he could surrender the reports only on order from the United States Attorney General.

Reilly then announced he would wire the Attorney General at Washington and ask him to turn the reports over to the defense "in the interest of justice."

He likewise announced he would call Sisk as a witness for the defense. The agent smiled wryly when he heard this. He was then excused.

Mrs. Whateley Recalled.

James J. Finn, New York City detective, told of his investigation of the $5 certificate, allegedly tossed by Hauptmann to the ticket seller at the Sheridan Theater, New York.

Finn said he showed the ticket seller, Mrs. Cecile Barr, the bill and she identified it.

Finn was excused without cross-examination.

Mrs. Elsie Whateley, widow of the Lindbergh butler, reappeared on the stand.

Wilentz drew corroborating testimony from Mrs. Whateley on the finding of the baby's thumb guard by nursemaid Betty Gow. Wilentz turned to the lighting of the house the night of the kidnaping.

Q. Were the lights in the house on all the time that evening?—A. Yes, they were.

The defense cross-examination of

MILLARD WHITED.

Miss Gow had insinuated that the lights had been flashed as a possible signal to the kidnaper.

Reilly then began cross-examination. He questioned her closely on the lights.

Q. The second floor you know nothing about?—A. Yes, I do.

She described the lighting in her own quarters, in the halls of the second floor and the nursery.

Reilly turned then to the thumb guard. He kept referring to it as "the mud guard."

Q. How long was that road from the Lindbergh house to the gate?—A. Nearly a mile.

Q. How wide is the path, 10 or 12 feet?—A. Yes.

Reilly took the witness over the details of her story on the finding of the thumb guard by Betty Gow.

Q. Did you see her bend down and pick it up?—A. I did.

Q. Who saw it first?—A. We both saw it together.

Court recessed for five minutes at 11:21 as Mrs. Whateley was excused.

Neighbor Testifies.

Millard Whited was next.

Q. From the first day of February to the first day of March, 1932, where did you live with relation to the Lindbergh estate?—A. I lived about a mile and a half from the Lindbergh estate.

Q. Did you own a farm there? A. I did.

Q. Did your farm adjoin the Lindbergh estate?—A. There was a 10-foot strip between my farm and the Lindbergh estate.

Q. How many years did you live near the Lindbergh estate?—A. Fall in 1925 to late in 1932.

Q. Did you see any strangers? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Bruno Richard Hauptmann?—A. I did.

Q. When did you see him?—A. About the eighteenth of February.

Q. Did you see him again?—A. I did.

Q. When was it?—A. Between the twenty-fifth and the twenty-seventh of February.

Q. That was the February before the Lindbergh kidnaping?—A. It was.

Whited recited the incident, saying he was going home to dinner and saw Hauptmann step out of the woods "on my left."

"I wondered why and where he came from," he added.

Q. So that on the second time you were only 6 feet away from him?—A. That's right.

Q. How close or how far away were you from him the first time?—A. About 8 feet.

Q. Is there any doubt in your mind that the man you saw was this defendant?—A. No, sir.

Whited said he saw Hauptmann again at the extradition proceedings in New York.

Q. Who were at your house the night of the kidnaping?—A. Mrs. Lindbergh, Wolf, the trooper; Lieut. Keating or Keaten, and two others I don't know.

Describes Bruno's Attire.

Wilentz asked him to describe Hauptmann's attire.

"He wore a gray suit," said Whited. "He wore a gray hat tipped down in the front and carried some sort of a coat over his arm."

Q. Did you see his eyes?—A. Yes, I saw his eyes.

Q. How close to Col. Lindbergh's estate was he the first time?—A. A mile and a quarter the first time.

Q. The second time?—A. Not over a half mile.

Wilentz asked him then if he read of Hauptmann's arrest in the newspapers last September—A. "I did not."

Q. Now, I don't want to offend you, Mr. Whited, but can you read?—A. A little, not much, not enough to understand the papers.

C. Lloyd Fisher, for the defense, on cross-examination asked Whited if he received "$30 yesterday for having his picture taken." The question was overruled.

Fisher sought to show, in Whited's answers, that he changed his estimate of the distance from the estate to the spot where Hauptmann allegedly appeared.

Q. Didn't you testify in the Bronx that the distance was a mile and a quarter, and here a mile? A. I don't know. I answer to the best of my knowledge. The roads are still in the same place.

Sister's Death Fixes Date.

Fisher pressed the witness to fix the date he first saw Hauptmann near the Lindbergh estate. The defense lawyer wanted a more exact time than "about the 18th of February." Whited, after conceding it might have been the 17th, blurted out that he could fix the date, "because I lost my sister on the 12th.

Q. You want to say you knew everybody who owned property in the vicinity and was around? A. I knew the property owners and the people lived there. I didn't know who Mr. Lindbergh had working in his house.

Fisher then demanded if the witness knew why the officers came to his house the kidnap night.

"Not exactly."

Q. Did you hear about a robbery at Blawenburg before the kidnaping?—A. Yes.

Q. And you thought the officers were there looking you up as a suspect in that robbery? Wilentz objected but Trenchard allowed the answer "No" to stand.

Q. When were you called up to identify Hauptmann after his arrest?—A. Sixth of October.

He then brought out Whited had been shown pictures of Hauptmann before identifying him.

The witness said he was driving 15 miles an hour when he observed Hauptmann come out of the woods near the estate.

Whited testified his car traveled about 500 feet in four minutes while he observed Hauptmann, looking up and down the road.

"You say you were going 10 miles an hour?" Fisher asked. "Do you know how many feet a car will go in four minutes at 10 miles an hour?

"Never Educated Enough."

Whited said he was "never educated enough to answer that."

Q. At the time, you made no mention of seeing this man in the woods?—A. No one asked me about it.

Q. Did you ever see Ollie Whateley?—A. I don't recall that I have.

Q. Did you ever see a picture of him?—A. I can't say that I did.

Q. Would you say that he looked like the defendant Hauptmann?—A. I can't say.

Charles Rossiter, of Maplewood, was called. Wilentz asked:

Q. Have you ever seen the defendant Bruno Richard Hauptmann before?—A. I did.

Q. Where did you see him?—A. On Route 31, near Prnicetion Airport.

Q. When did you see him?—A. On Route 31, near Princeton Airing.

Q. Where did you see Hauptmann?—A. He was standing at the rear of his car on the Hopewell road.

Q. What did you do?—A. I got out of my car and walked to the rear of his car. I offered help, but he said he didn't need any help.

"Looked Him Over."

Q. Did you proceed on your way?—A. I stood there looking him over.

Q. What sort of a hat did he wear?—A. Slouch hat.

Q. And then you proceeded on your way?—A. After looking him over.

Q. Before you proceeded on your way, how long was it?—A. A period of from 5 to 8 minutes, looking him over.

Reilly took over the witness.

Q. Have you ever made a mistake in identity?—A. Yes.

Q. How many times?—A. Possibly two or three times.

Q. When did you first see a picture of Mr. Hauptmann?—A. In the afternoon of September 20, 1934.

Q. How many days did it take you to make up your mind he was the man you saw?—A. A day and a half.

Max Rauch was called. He testified Hauptmann in 1932 occupied a house which he owned. He said Hauptmann moved to his Bronx home in October, 1931, and lived there at the time of the kidnaping.

Q. When did you rent it to Hauptmann?—A. Yes, October 15 or 16, 1931.

Q. Were you in the attic?—A. Yes, about October 5.

Q. When did you next go there?—A. After the arrest.

Tells of Missing Board.

Q. What did you find?—A. I missed a strip of a board about 9 feet. He completed part of the house and, then, there was nothing missing.

A large photographic enlargement was produced and Rauch pointed out to the jury the empty space made by the removal of the board.

The first of the State's wood experts, Joseph Doran, of McCormick, S. C., followed Rauch. It was brought out that Doran's lumber plant had shipped a consignment of South Carolina pine to New York at the time Hauptmann's home was being built. The date of the shipment was November 24, 1931.

William M. Schluter, of Valley Stream, Long Island, N. Y., bookkeeper for the Halligan & McClelland Lumber Co., testified to receipt of a lumber shipment from Doran's South Carolina mill in December, 1931.

Q. What happened to that lumber?—A. It was sold to the National Lumber & Mill Work Co., of the Bronx.

David Hirsch, part owner of the National Lumber & Mill Work Co. of the Bronx, was sworn. He was asked if Hauptmann bought lumber from his firm.

Hirsch said he did betwen December 31, 1931, and March 1, 1932.

Q. Do you know the defendant, Bruno Richard Hauptmann?—A. I do know Mr. Hauptmann.

Hirsh produced records showing purchase of lumber by Hauptmann on December 29, 1931.

"He paid $9.32," the witness said.

Court was adjourned until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Noisy Throng Defies Blizzard To Watch Trial

Coughs, Sneezes, Shouts Volley in Court Amid 'Quiet, Please!'

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22 (AP).—Amid volleys of coughs, sneezes and shouts for "Quiet, please!" Bruno Hauptmann's fight for his life continued today.

Lawyers, witnesses and visitors clumped up the old courthouse stairs with overshoes and umbrellas. Despite a blizzard, more visitors than ever before got into the courtroom, and several hundred stood in the aisles.

"Quiet!" boomed the deputies as the crowd shifted, talked and laughed. A witness at one point added to the informality by turning the tables on Defense Attorney Edward J. Reilly and inquiring: "Pardon me. May I ask what you're driving at?"

Twice the confusion ebbed; in dead quiet Millard Whited, Sourlands Mountain logger, told how he had seen Hauptmann twice in February, 1932, lurking near the Lindbergh estate. The noise died again when Charles P. Rossiter, a former food company salesman, testied he saw Hauptmann the Saturday night before the kidnaping, near the Princeton Airport.

Hauptmann and his wife heard the two statements without visible emotion. Mrs. Hauptmann, wearing the black dress she wore the first day of the trial, drowsed later when the executive of a Bronx lumber company testified.

Hauptmann and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh listened all day in similar postures, each leaning slightly to one side, his arms and legs crossed.

The shouts for quiet were most frequent when Whited was on the stand. Even the jury showed mirth when the sad-faced logger said "to the best of my knowledge" 17 times.

Once Whited said succintly, "I didn't pay any attention to the paper because I didn't have none in my hands." This drew another guffaw which the deputies quelled. The routine was repeated when an attorney mentioned "testifying," and Whited said, "What do you mean, testify?"

'The Thin Man' Gets the Breaks At Flemington

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22 (AP).—Slender spectators get the breaks at the Hauptmann trial.

Court ushers, in an effort to seat as many as possible in the cramped space, on several occasions today selected those who took up the least room.

"Are there any slender women or skinny men back here?" was the whispered appeal heard several times during today's session. The slenderest and skinniest were seated.

"Better to let three little ones sit down than one big one," one of the ushers explained.

68 Million Checks U. S. Yearly Output

Disbursing Officer Gives Figures to House.

Uncle Sam is writing something like 68,000,000 checks a year.

Guy F. Allen, the Treasury's chief disbursing officer, has estimated the number of checks issued each month at about 5,700,000, the Associated Press says. This would be 68,400,000 a year.

He gave the figures to House members for inclusion in their hearings on the Treasury Department appropriation bill.

But the check writing business was on the boom a few months ago. In the year ended last October emergency activities alone required 18,710,000 checks, with 58,388,000 attributed to the Civil Works Administration.

Officers Scour Canadian Line In Karpis Hunt

Trail Believed Regained With Discovery of Abandoned Car.

Detroit, Jan. 22 (AP).—Alvin Karpis, fast fleeing public enemy No. 1, was being sought tonight along both sides of the United States-Canadian boundary line, with Ontario provincial police joined by Michigan State officers and Department of Justice agents in the chase.

The trail of Karpis and his quick-shooting companion, Harry Campbell, lost near Philadelphia after they had shot their way from a police trap in Atlantic City Sunday, was believed picked up again today with the finding of a car near Monroe, Mich., which had been taken from an Allentown (Pa.) physican.

Belief that Karpis and Campbell might attempt to cross the boundary and perhaps continue toward Montreal, Karpis' old home, led Ontario provincial police to cover the border from Windsor south to Amherstburg.

Motor of Car Was Running.

So hurriedly did the pair who abducted Dr. H. H. Hunsicker at Allentown, and then released him after a wild 24-hour ride, abandon his car near a resort section of the Lake Erie shore line, that the motor was still running when a rural mail carrier came upon it.

Dell Clark, the carrier, said he saw one man leave the machine and walk in the direction of Monroe. Little importance was attached to the find, however, until State police had examined it, noted the Pennsylvania license plates and found Dr. Hunsicker's instrument bags in the tonneau.

With the identity of the car established, Department of Justice agents joined State police and Monroe officers in a search of resort cottages along the lake, and Ontario police took up the task on the Canadian side.

Federal officers directing the search on the American side of the boundary also gave some thought to the possibility Karpis and Campbell—if the pair still were together—might be making for the old Dillinger haunts in the upper peninsula of Michigan.

Two Slain in 6-Hour Siege.

Karpis and Campbell, survivors of the gang accused of kidnaping Edward Bremer, St. Paul banker, for $200,000 ransom, were flushed from hiding in Atlantic City Sunday soon after Fred Barker, alleged partner of Karpis in the kidnaping, and his mother had been shot to death by Federal agents in a 6-hour siege.

Shooting their way clear in a mad chase through the city, the trail of the pair was lost until their bullet-sprayed car was found abandoned near Quakertown, Pa. Again Department of Justice agents were enlisted.

The next clew came from near Akron, Ohio, where the Allentown (Pa.) physician was found trussed up with his own clothing in a rural grange hall.

Although the physician said he was "careful not to get a good look at them," he appeared certain that his captors were the fleeing public enemies.

Dr. Hunsicker, a psychiatrist at the Allentown State Hospital for Insane, said his only emotion during the ride was fear.

"I was scared, just plain, thoroughly scared," he said.

Maj. H. T. Esterly Dies.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 22 (AP).—Maj. Hilton T. Esterly, 60, chief supply officer of the United States Veterans' Hospital here, died today after an attack of appendicitis. Esterly was a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars. He will be buried in the Presido National Cemetery at San Francisco.

Boys in Joyride Trial Denied 'Full Hearing,' Prettyman Says

one of the principal causes of complaint.

Parents of the boys have charged that they were given no chance to testify before Judge Bentley. Consequently, they say, there was no chance to emphasize that both boys had good homes.

Moreover, according to the parents, Judge Bentley did not call the owner of the automobile, who, the parents say, was willing to drop the charge. The hearing, they say, did not last more than two or three minutes.

Appears on Sewage Case.

Corporation Counsel Prettyman appeared before the Senate District Committee yesterday in connection with the sewage disposal plant. Asked about the case of the two boys, he said:

"I am of the old-fashioned school of lawyers that believes that any one should have every opportunity to be heard and counsel to defend him."

Chairman William H. King opened the discussion by asking Prettyman if Judge Bentley had canceled the custom of her predecessor of holding "unofficial hearings" on some complaints and of keeping trivial complaints off the record.

Prettyman said that Miss Bentley had proposed such a change, but that he had advised her that it was her duty under the law to hold such "unofficial hearings" without taking every complaint into court at the outset.

Unjust Criticism, Says Copeland.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, expressed the opinion that Judge Bentley had been unjustly criticized. He said that the Rev. John O'Grady, of the Catholic Charities, had advised him against hasty criticism of the juvenile judge and had told him "These are bad boys."

Copeland asked Prettyman if his officers were not partly to blame for failing to object to the swift hearing. The corporation counsel said he did not think so.

Prettyman explained that one of the boys had no more serious charge against him than that of truancy, whereas the second boy had an aggregation of charges growing out of two alleged offenses—a theft by a group of boys and the throwing of rocks at duck eggs in the National Zoo.

Prettyman, in answer to a question by Senator Copeland, insisted that he was not criticizing Judge Bentley.

At the conclusion of the discussion, Chairman King instructed Prettyman to make a complete report to the committee on the functions and personnel of the District Juvenile Court.

In the public discussion that has raged since the two boys were sent to the National Training School, the principal issue has been this: Granting that the boys did wrong, what was the wisest thing to do? Send them to a reformatory or place them on probation so that they might remain under parental care at home?

Cite Dillinger Career.

Those who took the position that the boys would have been better off at home pointed out that reformatories too often serve as crime schools for boys. They cited the case of John Dillinger who, according to some of his biographers, developed his antisocial attitude, his determination to "get even" with society, in just such surroundings.

All of which has been very painful to Col. Claude D. Jones, an old regular Army man, who is superintendent of the National Training School for Boys, and likewise to the youngsters who are in his care.

Col. Jones paraded some 15 boys before a Washington Post reporter yesterday and invited him to fire questions at them. The discussion went something like this:

"What are you here for son?"

"Stealing an automobile."

"How do you like it?"

"Well, I'd rather be at home, but if I can't be there I'd rather be here than any place else. If you ask me, I think those two boys got what was coming to them, and people ought to stop yelling about it."

A boy from Buffalo, N. Y., said that he would have been eligible for parole some time ago, but decided to go to Eastern High School by day and stay at the institution at night.

"They all know who I am at school," he said. "They know I am out here, but they don't think there is any stigma on me.

"Do you know that our football team played last year against the Woodbury Forest School of Virginia, and against several of the high schools here? You can bet, though, that they are not going to play us if you fellows keep on calling us Dillingers."

Mother Thinks It Best.

Another lad said his mother cried and tried to keep him out of the institution at first. Now, he said, she thinks it has been the best thing that ever happened to him.

"How do you think she feels when she reads that we are Dillingers?" he asked.

And so it went. The food was all right, they said, and also the recreational facilities, the academic training, the trade schools and the cigarette allowance (for boys over 16).

Was there talk of crime among the boys?

"Well," said one, "no more than you would hear in school in town."

Fully 50 per cent of the boys are in the institution for the same reason that the Fanning and Penn boys are there—taking automobiles that happened to belong to somebody else.

Of those brought before the reporter, two admitted that their home life was unsatisfactory—that is, that there was dissension between the parents.

The point that has been stressed by the parents of the Fanning and Penn boys is that both have good homes. In the hearing before Judge Bentley, however, the parents had no chance to bring this out.

Col. Jones said yesterday that every effort is made to improve boys mentally and physically and prepare them for life on the outside.

tion; former United States District Attorney Leo A. Rover and others are to be called by the committee, it was said.

Quinn, it is said, has received many complaints from other lawyers. The committee intends to find out what those complaints were and what has been done about them, it was said.

"Although the committee has not heard from Mr. Quinn I am sure we can count on his cooperation," Representative Randolph said. "He has demonstrated his spirit of public service and the fact that the committee has not heard from him merely indicates, to me, that he is not anxious to thrust himself forward with a panaces."

Many to Be Called.

Members of the District judiciary, district attorney's office, court attaches, bondsmen, E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel; William A. Roberts, people's counsel; Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, and other officials are to be called, Representative Randolph said.

These officials are to be followed by representatives of civic, business, welfare, sociological and other organizations, as well as by individuals who are familiar with crime and underworld conditions by contact and personal experience, the committee has decided.

"The committee is desirous of making this the most complete and unbiased inquiry which has been made in this field," Representative Randolph said. "The committee is composed of responsible and well-equipped men and women of unquestioned ability, who are committed to that purpose. It is our hope that we can be of service not only to the National Capital, but to the thousands who visit the Capital and the entire country."

D. C. Employe Takes Poison While on Duty

Thaddeus L. Richards, 29, District employe, was reported in an undetermined condition at Emergency Hospital last night from effects of a quantity of poison he allegedly swallowed while on duty at police headquarters.

Richards was taken to the hospital from offices of the city refuge department on the sixth floor of the police building.

Mais and Legenza To Die February 2

the same sentence was pronounced. Legenza lay stolid and seemingly unhearing as Judge Ingram spoke. His eyes looked steadily toward the ceiling, but when the court order was tucked beneath his gray blanket he closed them. All during the procedure his whole body shook. It was the first time that local officers had ever seen the man lose even a trace of the animal-like calm which characterized him during his trial and confinement here.

The two recaptured gunmen arrived on the second section of the Havana special at 8:25 a. m. under a heavy guard of Federal men led by Frank X. Fay. They were taken immediately to the death cell in the middle of a calvalcade of cars from which long guns protruded.

Legenza, his eyes closed and his face immobile, was hoisted from the sleeper by four guards, who placed him on a stretcher which was trundled to a seven-passenger car which, with the seats removed, served as an impromptu ambulance.

Placed in Wheel Chair.

Mais, shackled so heavily that he could scarcely move under his own power, was helped from a vestibule and placed in a wheel chair. He wore handcuffs and extremely heavy leg chains, so tight that he could take no more than 4-inch steps.

Just 20 minutes after the train had pullel into the almost deserted station the two convicted killers were safely behind the high walls of the prison. Local officers were not notified of the jail breakers' return and none were on hand at the station.

The transfer from the train to the prison was effected in large Government cars driven down from Washington last night. The half-dozen agents who came from the Capital made preliminary arrangements with penitentiary officials and railway men.

Pale Scene of Crime.

The two gangsters were driven from the baggage room of the station almost over the spot where the crime was committed last March 9. It was on the roadway leading over the bridge at the terminal to the express agency offices that members of the Tri-State gang held up and killed E. M. Huband, a Federal Reserve mail driver. Captured in Baltimore several months later, the two were tried here and sentenced to the electric chair. Two days before their scheduled transfer to the death house they shot themselves out of the city jail and disappeared. They were apprehended in New York last Friday, and since have been subjected to prolonged grilling.

Fay, Department of Justice agent who was instrumental in their captures, sat down with relief as the inner penitentiary bars clanged behind his charges.

Mother of Mais Will Be Allowed One Visit to Son

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Mais, the white-haired mother of Robert Mais, tri-State gangster brought back here today to die in the electric chair on February 2, will be permitted to see her son once more, but there will be no farewell embrace, prison officials said today.

An order from the State Prison board is necessary for any one to visit Mais or his companion in crime, Walter Legenza. Authorities said permission had been given for a visit by Mrs. Mais, but that she would not be allowed to touch her son or come within 3 feet of him.

After Mais and Legenza shot their way out of the Richmond City Jail Mrs. Mais was indicted on a charge of smuggling pistols to them, but later was released without a trial.

ber that they obtained their first real clew.

In a series of swift raids at that time, they smashed the gang's headquarters in North Philadelphia and captured seven persons. Information they obtained there led to a small house in Torresdale Manor, just north of the city.

There they uncovered evidence, they said, that indicated Weiss had been held in that place. They learned also from what they found in the shack that the route of the mob led to New York—a factor that eventually led to last week's roundup and the "end of the trail" for the gang.

State's Dean Of Bar Dies In Hospital

George M. Beltzhoover Was Leader in State Affairs.

Mary Huldah Dewey Succumbs at 98 in Charles Town.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—George M. Beltzhoover, 91, Union veteran and oldest attorney in West Virginia, died this morning in the Charlestown General Hospital, where he had been a patient the last ten days. Ailments incident to age caused his death.

He came to Shepherdstown in 1866 where he began his practice of law. He was nominated on the Democratic ticket for prosecuting attorney of Jefferson County and defeated the late William L. Wilson for that nomination. He served one term in that capacity and in 1876 was elected to the State Legislature for a two-year term.

Mr. Belthoover was active in the passage of the Flick amendment, enfranchising Confederate veterans.

Born on Site of Indian School.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With C. B. Carr

Post State Editor.

PROGRESS has almost absorbed the color and vividness of invention. When the first Baltimore & Ohio iron horse snorted and wheezed along its course between Baltimore and Ellicott City horses reared, spectators gaped, and cynics scoffed.

Within the next month, the first electric train of the Pennsylvania road will slip through the Maryland countryside with electrical silence on its trial run from New York to Washington. But things have changed. Horses in adjoining pastures will probably continue munching. The farm boy, walking along the tracks—otherwise unimpressed—will only recall that he had read somewhere that the new typed trains would soon begin service.

Although the tri-State area boasts two of the finest carillons in the United States—and possibly in the world—only one, the famous bells of Mercersburg Academy in Pennsylvania, pours its majestic tones over the surrounding hills. The stately tower in Richmond which was built to enshrine the memories of the World War dead has been mute for several years because no appropriations from the Virginia Assembly have been made.

Each Sunday music lovers arrive at Mercersburg from all points within driving distance to enjoy the music of what has been termed by critics as the "most majestic musical instrument."

In the next session of the Virginia Assembly, however, authoritative sources claim that steps will be taken to revivify Richmond's "pining tower."

Union Asks Probe Of Tire Factory

Labor Contract Violation Alleged at Cumberland.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—A resolution from Local No. 19007, United Rubber Workers' Federal Labor Union, demanding an investigation by the Mayor and City Council of the affairs of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co., was read in council yesterday and ordered filed.

The resolution claims that more than $750,000 of local capital was subscribed and given to the tire company, and that tax exemption and street improvements as well as other favors have been granted by the city and county. It is also charged the company has violated its contract with the city, as the plant does not employ 3,500 persons as promised in the agreement. An investigation of the receivership of the company is requested.

Lewis M. Wilson, city solicitor, advised the Mayor and Council that any action taken by city officials at this time might constitute contempt of court, as the affairs of the company are in the hands of the court and the receivers.

Park Is Urged At Monticello

Carson Backs Proposal to Make Jefferson's Home a National Shrine.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.) William E. Carson, former chairman of the State Conservation and Development Commission, favors the acquisition of Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson, by the United States Government as a part of the national park project.

The suggestion that the Federal Government take over the shrine was first made to Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, member of Congress from the Eighth Virginia District, who in turn has referred the proposal to citizens of Charlottesville and Albemarle County in order to ascertain their sentiment.

Stuart G. Gibboney, of New York, president of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, has informed Representative Smith that he will present the proposal to the board of governors of the foundation at its next meeting in February.

Fred W. Twyman, local member of the board of governors of the foundation, who launched the first campaign for funds with which to purchase the Jefferson home and was responsible for raising $22,000 in Charlottesville and Albemarle County, is heartily in favor of the suggestion, which is understood to have the sanction of Secretary Ickes, of the Interior Department.

Warning Is Issued On Scarlet Fever

Near Epidemic Reported in West Virginia.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—A warning that scarlet fever is assuming "almost epidemic proportions" in West Virginia was issued by Dr. A. E. McClue, State health commissioner.

The commissioner said reports indicate the disease is present in every section of the State, with a total of 136 cases reported in the last week in 33 counties, bringing the total for the last month to 517 cases, compared to 337 for a similar period last year.

Dr. McClue appealed for public cooperation with physicians in maintaining strict quarantine, with complete isolation, not only of the patient, but also of those in attendance, to control the disease and the sterilization of all utensils and equipment used in the care of patients.

Lobby Grows As Maryland Debates Tax

Legislators Can't Agree on Relief Required Or Source.

Time Limit Extension by U. S. Hinted at Conference.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Opening the fourth week of the session, Maryland's lawmakers gathered here tonight still without any definite idea of the amount they must raise for relief, or where they are to get the money, but with the need for haste apparently removed.

Members of the Legislature did, however, find an augmented corps of lobbyists who will tell them where the money can—or can not—be raised.

The original estimate of relief funds needed was $8,000,000, which the Federal Government said must be provided by February 1. State political leaders yesterday made an appeal against this assessment, in a conference with Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins in Washington. Hopkins took the request under consideration, but there were evidences that the National Government no longer asks the State to raise funds within the next nine days.

Two Factors Cited.

The uncertainty over the amount needed for relief in the State is due to two factors. One is the possible effect of the Federal Government's new work-relief plan on the State's contribution to relief needs. The other is that no definite answer was obtained to the request that Maryland's share in the relief load be reduced.

On the basis of the original $8,000,000 assessment, Gov. Harry W. Nice estimated that about $11,000,000 must be raised as an extraordinary budget this year. The remainder was for old-age pensions, to make up the deficit and to provide working capital and other smaller needs. Changes in the picture since this estimate was made reduce to two the definite needs—$2,300,000 for the deficit, and $1,500,000 for working capital. The State will have to have at least this much—how much more depends on future developments.

3 New Lobbyists.

Three new lobbyists have registered themselves as required by law since the Governor sent to the Legislature his suggested new sources of tax revenue.

Among them are Joseph B. Boyle, manager of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, which operates the race tracks at Bowie and Marlboro. A heavier tax on race bets was one of the suggestions of the Governor.

Another is Edna P. Payne, who represents the Federation of Republican Women of Maryland. The federation is interested in the old-age pension law and the legislation to allow women to serve on juries.

The administration's old-age pension bill and legislation providing for the investigating commission asked in his inaugural address will be ready for introduction in the House and Senate later in the week, Gov. Nice said tonight. The budget, he said, has gone to the printer, but will not be ready for introduction until some time in February. The constitution provides that it need not be introduced until February 9.

Tax Bill Drawn.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.). The mayor and city council yesterday authorized City Solicitor Lewis M. Wilson to prepare a bill to be submitted to the Allegany County delegation in the General Assembly, making it mandatory upon tax payers residing within the corporate limits of Cumberland to pay the City Collector all taxes due the city on motor vehicles, before license tags shall be issued from the commissioner of Motor Vehicles office.

Relatives in China in July, 1932, upon the request of Eak's father, who is living here, fastened on Eak a tag, with his name and destination and placed him aboard a liner for Hagerstown. Jury Awaits Case Against Jewett Craig

Both Sides Rest in Virginian's Trial for Slaying.

Defendant Denies He Recalls Shooting of His Chief.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Jewett Craig, on trial for murder, took the witness stand in Hustings Court here today and declared he was so drunk on the morning of January 3 he did not recall the fatal shooting of Edmund J. Tice, assistant superintendent of transportation for the Norfolk & Western Railway Co.

The 52-year-old railway clerk denied he held a grudge against the slain man or held him responsible for a demotion two and a half years ago. He said he blamed his own drinking for the order removing him from a position as traveling agent and placing him in the transportation department as a clerk.

Craig was on the stand for about an hour and 20 minutes. He insisted he could recall none of the conversation that occurred between him and the slain man immediately prior to the shooting but had a vague recollection of being in Tice's office.

Both Sides Rest.

Defense Counsel T. Warren Mesick rested his case immediately after the defendant concluded his testimony and rebuttal evidence by the State followed. This required only a few minutes and court recessed shortly before 5 o'clock to convene again at 7:15 for the delivery of the court's instructions and the arguments of attorneys.

The case was expected to reach the jury tonight. Presiding Judge J. Lindsay Almond, jr., said he was not permitted to limit the attorneys in their arguments. However, there was general impression that two to three hours would be sufficient.

A hush fell over the small court room as the slightly built defendant took the witness stand. Spectators, crowded into every available space, craned their necks for a glimpse of him as he walked firmly around the counsel table and took his seat facing the 12 men who have been asked to send him to the electric chair for the shooting of his chief.

In a voice that was low but distinct he told of consuming a full pint of whisky the morning Tice was shot. Craig said that he had owned an automatic pistol for about 15 years and had carried it on numerous occasions. He denied that he had any motive in carrying it.

Calls Memory Vague.

Although he admitted having talked with police in the police detective room of the Municipal Building when he was arrested soon after the shooting, he insisted he was unable to recall statements ascribed to him. His memory of statements made the following day before Detective J. B. Jennings, Assistant Prosecutor C. E. Cuddy and others was faulty. He did not deny making the statements.

Various police officers had testified that Craig told them Tice had been "riding him," for two and a half years, that Tice "had it in for him," that Tice took him "off the road," and made other statements supporting the State's contention that he "nursed a grudge" against the slain man. Commonwealth's Attorney Smith sought in vain to obtain an admission from the accused that he made the statements.

His replies to Smith's queries along this line were to the effect that he must have made the statements if the witnesses said so, but that he did not remember them.

Preceding his testimony, his wife had told the jury that when Craig left home on the morning of January 3, he was as drunk as she had ever seen him in their 19 years of married life. She also said he was drinking the night before.

There Are Rumblings That the Belasco Art Theater Society Will Resume Soon

Three Weeks Is Guess of Those 'In the Know!'

Changes in Cast Planned; Concerning That Tenor; Playhouse Jottings. . .

Reprinted from yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

One learns from sources of reasonable authenticity that the rumors of the reorganization and resumption of operations of the Belasco Art Theater Society, Myrtis Morgan, managing directress, were not as nebulous as some pretended to believe at the time of the recent closing of the Lafayette Square company.

Reorganization has been going forward rapidly and it is now being whispered about in the better-informed subterranean passages that repoening will occur not later than March 1 and possibly within as short a time as three weeks—which adds up almost to the same thing.

Helen Kingsley and Grandon Rhodes, the leads of the lately defunct acting group, it is being bruited about, will not be among those present upon the resumption of Art Society's enterprise.

Some New Faces.

It is, on the other hand, hinted with equal emphasis that Beth Thompson will be the new company ingenue and that the male juvenile may possibly be some one no less distinguished than Russell Gleason, the talented son of Jimmy and Lucille, noted both on stage and screen as writers of plays as well as actors in them.

It is suggested, also, that when, as and if the new season at the Belasco gets under way, the exploitation and publicity will be under the energetic hand of Mr. Bob Hurleigh, a young man about the showshops who not only knows the day of the week, but also what time it is.

This all augurs for a more successful experiment than the last one, from which, one ass ies, its sponsors learned a very great deal, indeed.

If none of this comes to pass—as sometimes things do not—may we entreat, in the words of the ladylike young person at the other end of that wire, that you "excuse it, please?"

In the announcement from that erudite and helpful scrivener on the executive staff of Miss Katharine Cornell's distinguished enterprises, Mr. Ray Henderson, that Blanche Yurka now is acting the role of the Nurse in Miss Cornell's sumptuous production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" there is, perhaps, a bit of a shock for one of the Capital's aspiring playwrights. The last I heard, there were serious thoughts of intrusting the stellar role in Mr. Edward de Selding Meicher's latest play, "44 Below"—created here by that admirable actress, Maud Howell Smith—to Miss Yurka, in case a metropolitan production of that snowy and salty comedy could be arranged. Our own selection for the part was—and still is—Winnie Lightner.

Miss Yurka's Experiment.

There are additional items of interest associated with Miss Yurka's assumption of the role of the Nurse in "Romeo and Juliet."

This is a new departure for Miss Yurka, who never has appeared in a character of this nature, a stark contrast to the many notable parts she has played.

Twice before, however, she has been seen in Shakespeare—as the queen to John Barrymore's Hamlet and as Portia in "The Merchant of Venice" in the Detroit Civic Repertory Theater.

Miss Yurka's presence in the cast of "Romeo and Juliet" is due to a gracious gesture of her own. When Edith Evans was compelled suddenly to return to England, Miss Yurka asked if there was anything she could do to be of assistance to Miss Evans or Miss Cornell.

A few days later Miss Cornell thought it would be interesting if Miss Yurka would undertake the role of the Nurse, which Miss Evans had acted. Miss Yurka liked the idea, but requested that she be permitted to rehearse the role three days before giving her decision, inasmuch as the character was entirely foreign to her past experience in the theater. "She got the job."

The Blackfriars Guild of Washington announces "Big-Hearted Herbert," by Sophie Kerr and Anna Steese Richardson, as its second production of the current season. It will be acted in St. Paul's Auditorium, Fifteenth and V streets, early in March. This will mark the first presentation of the play in Washington by a nonprofessional group. Casting is now going on under the direction of Angela Kier. "Cradle Song," by P. Martinez Serra, will be the Guild's third production, to be given during the Lenten season.

Meet Mr. Novis!

That distinguished young tenor, Donald Novis, headlining this week's vaudeville bill at the Earle Theater, does not quite date back to the year 1066!

He does, however, date back to the community known as Hastings, in England. And Hastings has claims upon the memories of even the least retentive students of English history. It was here in 1066, you will recall, that one William the Conqueror performed one of the world's major tasks of subjugation with his Normans, operating principally upon the career of a kingly person known as Harold of England.

Donald Novis was born in Hastings and among his earliest recollections must be the grim ruins of Harold's old castle upon which William performed so successful an assault. His mother used to wheel him out to look upon the consequences of a considerable debacle that happened along to Hastings on a day slightly earlier than his own. He may not even remember, as a matter of fact, for when Donald was still a wee broth of a boy, as the saying goes, his father moved the family to Canada.

Father Also Singer.

In the small backwoods town of Chapleau, where the only railroad was the single-track affair that brought the timber down out of the woods, the senior Novis kept his modest cobbler's shop. When not cobbling, he sang for the edification of the villagers and such stray coins as his vocal efforts managed to entice from the pockets of his listeners. In course of time, his son became a better singer than his dad.

Donald is now 27 years old. . . . From their simple Canadian home, his family made the long trek to Pasadena, Calif. . . . Donald went to Pasadena High School, also attended by Charlie Paddock, the erstwhile "fastest human," and Ellsworth Vines. . . . Then Whittier College. . . . And then the Atwater Kent radio auditions of 1928. . . . He won the West Coast auditions and came East to take the national honors among the male voices, while our own Hazel Arth was capturing the feminine top honors. . . . The rest you know. . . . I mean about his appearing with Ronald Colman in "Bulldog Drummond." . . . Arthur Hammerstein's engaging him for the stage, his appearance in "Luana," "The Rounders" and finally at the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles, the most sought-after "spot" the other side of the mountains. . . . And now look at him! . . . As good a voice as the contemporary stage can boast. . . . And he is "regular" along with it all. . . . But don't get fresh with him. . . . He boxed professionally a year under an assumed name. . . . Until his family found it out!

The Eckington Community Players will present a brief version of William Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" January 30 at 8:15 p. m. in Langley Junior High School Auditorium, under the supervision of Marie Moore Forrest and direction of Mary Olive O'Connell. Among those who will appear in the leading roles are Marjorie Folk, Catherine Cronenberg, Margaret McDowell, George Miller, Guss Bellazza, Rhodes K. Scherer, William Milton, James Thomas, Vernon Lyden and several guest players.

Dots and Dashes.

As already hinted, the best voice in town this week is Donald Novis' . . . And the best instrumental number Don Alfonso Zelaya's piano transcription of "The Continental" . . . Played with fine effect with Freddie Clark's orchestra on the same bill . . . That would be at the Earle . . . And is Audrey Sieber all done up in black and white! . . . Or is Audrey Sieber all done up in black and white? . . . Anyhow, you get the idea . . . Alex Hyde, whose excellent band is toplining the stage bill at Loew's Fox was last in town as manager for Ina Ray Hutton and her "Melodears" . . . That feminine aggregation of instrumentalists was Alex's original girls band . . . More about him and them tomorrow . . . Eddie Lowe and Jack Holt coming to town as co-stars in a new flicker, "May the Best Man Win," or something . . . 8 to 5 that Jack doesn't get the girl . . . Fred Stone, whose "Jayhawker" didn't do too well on the stage, is out in Hollywood . . . Is about to make debut in his first talkie . . . Was in silent pictures with indifferent success about 16 years ago . . . This new departure is just by way of celebrating his fifty-first year in show business . . . 51 years is quite a spell of time . . . Any way you look at it . . . Nice letter from Harry Essex yesterday . . . Harry is in Pittsburgh looking after the minor matter of pufficity for "On to Fortune," last week's play at the National . . . Still being groomed for Broadway . . . And they'll put it across, yet, . . . You watch . . . Or don't watch and see if I care! . . . . . .

Slight Interruption Note.

Pardon me, while I shake a couple of desks and a few stray tables and waste paper baskets out of my hair. Some of the boys and girls are moving into the new addition to Washington's fastest growing newspaper and the going at this point is getting just a little thick.

So we will go down and watch "Three Men on a Horse" in preference to what amounts to three horses on a man, if you don't mind!

I'll be seeing you over in that other column, a little to the East.

On Screen at RKO-Keith's Today

Absent from the local screen for many months, Marian Marsh once more will assert the youthful charm that elevated her to the post of leading woman opposite John Barrymore in more than one film, at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning this morning, in the articulate version of Gene Stratton Porter's "The Girl of the Limberlost." Miss Marsh, however, is only one of a distinguished cast that also includes Louise Dresser, Ralph Morgan, Helen Jerome Eddy and many others of note.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Piano recital by Ruth Slenczynski in Constitution Hall. Program: Sonata in C sharp minor (Beethoven), Sonata in M major (Mozart), Nocturne in B flat minor, Grande Valse Brillante in E flat major, Mazurkas in F sharp minor and B minor, Etudes in A minor, C minor and C major (Chopin).

A musical talent of this remarkable quality occurs so seldom that we rightly reserve for its possessor the term prodigy. Fortunate circumstances of heredity and environment, quickened by that energizing spark which may or may not become manifest as genius, have brought forth in Ruth Slenczynski at the age of ten a pianistic ability far in advance of her years. The technical aptitude that resides in her small, plump hands is but one of her valid claims for serious consideration as a precocious musician; she has as well a lyric tone of more than potential beauty, and a temperamental elan extraordinary in a child.

So short of stature that she can just reach the pedals of a concert grand by sitting on the very edge of the bench, she played her taxing program in a posture that left her elbows below the level of the keyboard. When striking fortissimo chords, she was obliged to raise her body in order to obtain the necessary forearm leverage, and during several of the more strenuous compositions, her father sat in a chair behind her to lay a steadying hand on the bench.

Foremost in her equipment is her amazing finger dexterity that makes light of prestissimo passages and produces an even and clear succession of tones. The limitations of her technique apparently are those imposed only by her physical immaturity; she goes as far as her present muscular strength will permit. None save adult experts surpass her in speed and in the surety with which she threads intricate phrases.

She has an inherent sense of rhythm, and follows it in a way that sometimes departs from the traditional procedure. Although she is not always able to produce the full effects she has in mind, her interpretations are essentially intuitive in their insight. Some of her readings were startling in their emotional urgency.

The surge of the "Revolutionary" etude and the tempestuous velocity of the "Winter Wind" etude were astounding in so young a player. The revelations of temperament here disclosed were prophetic, one hopes, of the great interpreter which Ruth may become. More restraint was evident in the Beethoven sonata, of which the first two movements were well proportioned in tone and tempi, although she let herself go with surprising dash in the finale.

Enthusiastically applauded by her auditors, Ruth added two extra numbers at the end of the recital: a concert etude by her father, and the Liszt variations on the theme of the Paganini caprice later used by Brahms and later still by Rakhmaninov for pianistic elaboration. These difficult and seldom-played variations did not seem formidable to the child, who boldly set them forth in virtuoso style. This was perhaps the most exciting moment in a recital full of wonders.

Without any doubt, Ruth is endowed with a talent rich in potentialities of artistry. How her powers will unfold no one can foretell, but the individuality that gleams here and there in her playing promises a full development.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Here, perhaps, is what will prove the surprise comedy of the year.

Boasting no great star names, heralded as nothing more than another farce, that Alex Yokel—with the more or less secret connivance of the Warner Brothers—deemed amusing, and making its initial bow before any public audience in the National Theater, "Three Men on a Horse" galloped into immediate favor as a long-shot winner in the eyes of an hilarious house last evening.

"Three Men on a Horse," in this or any other season, would be unique. Primarily, because known stage personalities of the first flight would ruin the simple naturalness of its action, diction and reasonably normal development; secondarily, because it is a play that needs the common touch, the uninspired performance and the utterly commonplace treatment that it receives to score so overwhelmingly with cash customers intent only on enjoying themselves.

Farce Has What It Takes!

To be perfectly frank about it, there is a good deal the atmosphere and unaffected simplicity in the staging and enactment of "Three Men on a Horse" that one expects of a resident stock company.

It is unpretentious, undignified, unadorned by any of the flossy processes of high-flown writing and unaccountably amusing.

It is one of those unexpected and entirely uncomplicated bits of foolery that occasionally come along and by nothing beyond the sheer gayety of their moods, the straightforward raucousness of their humor and the frank exposition of types that do not command top ranking in the social or business scale, click off substantial hits that are as inexplicable as they are exciting to first-nighters and later eager pewholders.

By these partially negative introductory remarks I do not at all mean to derogate the excellent work of a cast that could hardly be improved upon. "Three Men on a Horse" does not need profound Thespianism to make it a vibrant, if not vital, work. Whatever a comedy needs to "put it over" this one seems to have!

Mr. Lynn Scores.

Nothing could be more particularly or more plaintively in the spirit of the amiable fol-de-rol that the Messrs. John Cecil Holm and George Abbott have contrived than the expert performance of its central role by William Lynn, as the suburban greeting-card writer whose major concerns, after all, are his wife, his home, his job and his irascible boss and not the race-track selections he coyly and cagily dopes out on his way into town on the bus!

Mr. Lynn, like most of the other members of the cast which he embellishes, is not a familiar mime to these aging eyes. Neither are Joyce Arling, who does an uncommonly effective, if slightly lachrymose, piece of limning as his distraught and trusting wife; Fleming Ward, as the annoying brother-in-law, or Shirley Booth, as an easy-going young chatelaine of the form-chart boys, who plays her part right down to the ground, or up to the hilt, or anything you like. I mean she plays it!

And as for the tracksters themselves, give me Millard Mitchell, Teddy Hart and Sam Levene, anytime, over players better known, more widely publicized but probably far less competent. These lads turn in a totally devastating depiction of a triumvirate of small-time grifters it would be difficult, indeed, to surpass.

In Case You Wish to Laugh.

And there, largely you have it—a play that manages to appreciate the commonplace, a cast that manage to appreciate its play and, out front, a crowd that is not indifferent to the superior merits of both.

If it were necessary to run down the whole line of dramatis personae, none would be overpraised by being mentioned as a contributor of an agile bit to a splendid ensemble. As it is, nothing seems to remain to be done but emphasize that here is a rollicking evening in the theater—a little rowdy, a little indelicate, a little too outspoken, maybe once or twice, but just what the doctor ordered if it is wholehearted laughter springing from sources deep in the anatomy that you need.

I haven't heard such spontaneous applause any time this season as greeted the appearance of the cast following the fall of the final curtain. Last night's was a fine tribute to a practically unknown group of players who put a play across with everything they had—which was plenty!

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

A FASHION parade is being filmed for "Roberta," the next Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers flicker. About eight beautiful girls wearing expensive gowns and coats are to walk down a long flight of stairs as the camera follows them.

There is a large portable dressing room behind the set and the girls are quartered here, awaiting word from an assistant director to go out and face the camera. Each girl is photographed individually on the stairs.

The portable dressing room seems like a dugout and the girls seem like players, waiting for the coaches' word to get into the game. One girl can't sit down in her dress, she is tired from standing, awaiting her turn to go on. Another girl is lying lengthwise on a couch; she can't stand for the dress is too heavy and bears her down.

Another girl can't smoke a cigarette or go near an electric bulb. It is amusing to see the odd positions of the different girls in the portable hut. Yet they will display the latest fashions. You will see them on the screen and envy their attire. But you could take very few of them out dancing, for only several are wearing gowns which are practical.

The gals tell me that the most fashionable gowns are like that: They are to be seen and admired only.

* * * *

FOR your score card, so you will know the beauty parade when it passes you on the screen, here is the official line-up of the gals. The tall blonde who resembles Carole Lombard is Lucile Ball, Mack Gray's—the killer—girl friend. The stately red head in the silver gown—she's the one who couldn't sit down—is Virginia Reed. The beautiful tall brunette is Kay Sutton, and you'll see a good close-up of her for she's the cameraman's girl friend. Jane Hamilton is the cute, medium-sized blonde, and the cute medium-sized brunette is Wanda Perry, the only one of the girls brought to Hollywood by Earl Carroll still in pictures. The blonde statuesque show girl, the only one wearing a revealing gown, is Betty Dumbries, who used to show off in Ziegfeld shows. These are the headliners of the beauty parade. See, I went and got acquainted so you'd know them.

Fred Astaire wasn't working this day. He was home with a cold. However, I did learn that Astaire never plays a dramatic scene for the camera on the same day that he dances, for his face gets tired. He doesn't want a tired face photographed. With most dancers it's the feet that get tired.

Mack Gray, both Lucille Ball's and George Raft's bodyguard, has wanted to be an actor. It was finally arranged and Mack was given a role in the melodrama, "Car 99." There is no actor in Hollywood who pays more attention to his make-up and to his role than Gray. His part calls for him to drive a car and his speaking role consists of one line: "Take her to the dressing room."

Mack can't drive a car so they have to use a double for him in most of the scenes. He hasn't read his one line yet but he hopes it is suitable and they don't have to use a double to dub in the line. He stays home every night memorizing his line. He wants to make good as an actor.

DIRECTOR VAN DYKE'S new honey is Jeanette MacDonald. Van Dyke is directing "Naughty Marietta" and the leading lady is Miss MacDonald, which makes her the latest to be called Honey.

Van Dyke, Honey and several hundred extras are gathered on and about a large wooden boat on the back lot at Metro waiting for the sun to shine. The boat is to leave Havre for New Orleans with Jeanette MacDonald, but the boat can't sail until the sun shines. Other boats may need water to go sailing, but this one needs sunshine.

Just two minutes of sunshine. Every one waits for hours for that two minutes of sunshine in sunny Hollywood, which this day is cold and cloudy. Suddenly, like a hired actor, the sun appears in make-up. "Hurry, Honey," shouts Van Dyke. "Give it to me right after the principal player disappears." Miss MacDonald on the deck of the boat waves good-by to the crowd on the Havre shore as the boat sails—by pulleys. Five minutes after the scene is taken there is a cloudburst.

Mae West in "Now, I'm a Lady," has just played a scene in which she serves tea for several Southampton society ladies and messes things up by her slang talk and spilling the tea. This part of the script is completed when an executive comes on the set and introduces Mae West to Lord and Lady Byng, visiting nobility. Mae serves tea on the set. She doesn't spill it and acts like a lady.

The assistant director, however, believes he is being kidded when informed that the guests are nobility, Lord and Lady Byng. He says aloud: "Byng, Byng, her come the British."

Pepper Gains Office He Lost By Negligence

Anne Arundel Vacates His Election, Then Names Him Treasurer.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 22 (AP).—Joseph H. Pepper, Republican treasurer-elect of Anne Arundel County, today was appointed treasurer by the Board of County Commissioners, after they had vacated his election because of a legal technicality.

Pepper, who was elected on November 6, did not file his county bond until January 7. Under the county law the commissioners are empowered to set aside the treasurer-elect and appoint his successor unless he files bond within 30 days after election.

Will Take Office in May.

The board vacated the office to comply with the law, but immediately appointed Pepper. He will take office May 6 and remain until the next county general election.

A large delegation which waited the decision of the board, voted in executive session, greeted the announcemnt of the vote with cheers. Thomas J. Cullimore, president of the commissioners, said the vote was unanimous.

Benjamin Michaelson, attorney to the board, filed an opinion holding that the county law made it mandatory upon the commissioners to declare Pepper's election vacated. He ruled, however, that although Pepper failed to qualify under the law, that he is eligible for appointment to "fill the vacancy created by his negligence."

Petitions Are Read.

Two letters asking the commissioners, all Democrats, to declare the treasurer's office vacant were read. They were from the Anne Arundel County Democratic Club and the Roosevelt Democratic Club.

Previously a letter from E. Churchill Murray, president of the Better Government League, was read, protesting the naming of anyone except Pepper if the office is vacated.

"I think that it would be gross abuse of your authority to appoint anyone other than Mr. Pepper," Murray said on being granted the floor. "Taking advantage of a mere technicality would be as raw a move as you could make.

By Morgan Baker.

ELIMINATION of the 5 per cent pay cut, restoration of annual leave and removal of the restrictions on promotion are all three necessary to the restoration of the civil service to conditions as they were before the depression, it was declared last night by Dr. Leonard D. White, civil service commissioner.

BAKER.

Improvements in the public service constituted the theme of Dr. White's statement.

One of the fundamental demands, he said, in these improvements is to bring the patronage employes within the merit system.

Other improvements include a board of review to conciliate or arbitrate differences between employes and their supervisory officers. However, Dr. White said, it would be unfortunate if the existence of such a tribunal should transform administrative questions into legal issues or should act in the direction of making it more difficult for incompetent persons to be eliminated from the public service.

"A healthy service needs both adequate protection against abuse of power and adequate means of getting rid of those employes who prove to be unequal to their tasks," the merit system expert emphasized.

The public service would be much more attractive if there were better methods for arranging transfers from office to office and for filling higher positions by promotion or by transfer instead of by calling for open competitive examination, it was pointed out.

There should be a much more rigid elimination of unfitted employes during their probationary period, Dr. White said, and then revealed a flaw in the present system.

"At the present time it is rare indeed for a probationer to be discharged because he has shown himself unsuited for his work. I wish I could believe that this testifies to the universal success of the examinations given by the Civil Service Commission, but unfortunately, I am not able to do so."

Dr. White concluded his statement with a strong recommendation for greatly extended training courses for young persons in the service to enable them to prepare themselves for higher positions and greater responsibilities. He also paid tribute to the American Federation of Government Employes for its sponsorship of National Civil Service Week last week.

Personnel Chief Transferred.

Regarded as one of the most able men in Federal Housing Administration, Troy B. Hewitt, of Tampa, Fla., has been transferred from personnel director to a field position, it was revealed by FHA officials last night. Mrs. Bertha Rees, assistant personnel director, who was formerly with Civil Service Commission, is reported to have taken over Mr. Hewett's duties.

Mr. Hewett probably will leave this week for California, where he will survey the better housing program drive there. Later he will go to other States, taking the best features of the campaign in each locality for incorporation into the national program.

The Floridian has borne the brunt of conflict between his Republican superiors in FHA and Democratic members of Congress over patronage. This conflict during the brief life of FHA has often submerged Mr. Hewett, resulting in the FHA being labeled an "administrative madhouse."

Harris & Ewing.

TROY B. HEWETT, personal director at the stormy Federal Housing Administration, transferred to a field position, his first station being California.

From our investigations at FHA it seems that Frank C. Straat, office manager and assistant comptroller, and reputed Republican, is the personnel dictator. What success he will have in running through appointments over violent objections from Capitol Hill in the future remains to be seen as Hewett's successor, Mrs. Rees, is an employe of thorough training in the merit system, due to her career at Civil Service Commission.

MANY devices of commercial and military value are found in the latest list of patents granted to Government employes. Some of the inventors and their products are:

Matt Q. Corbett (F), Navy, designer of a heat-exchanger for recovering water vapor from the exhaust gases of internal combustion engines.

George A. Graham and James W. Goodwin, Agriculture, collaborators on a gas-flow meter that can be held in the hand, taking the place of the large, bulky meters generally in use.

Samuel R. Harris and Harvey N. Lumm, War, collaborators on a liquid compass bowl.

James C. Karnes and Gregory J. Kessenich, Navy, collaborators on an apparatus for teaching student aviators. Images are projected on not one, but three walls of a chamber, so that the student will have visual effects forward as well as to either side of him.

Bradley Jones (P), Navy, inventor of a compass deviation corrector for use on aircraft.

Sidney P. Vaughn (F), Navy, inventor of a snap-action device for thermostats for opening and closing valves, switches, etc.

Policy to Aid Wild Life Urged

Darling Likens Game to 'Never-Invited-Out' Bow-Legged Girl.

Debate Rages for Four Hours; Resolution Is Due Today.

NEW YORK, Jan 22 (AP).—Likening game to the bow-legged girl—always sympathized with but never invited to the picnic—J. N. (Ding) Darling, chief of the United States Biological Survey, today appealed before the twenty-first American game conference for a national policy for the conservation of wild life resources.

The well-known newspaper cartoonist was one of a score of speakers who participated in an exciting session precipitated by the proposal of the National Association of Audubon Societies for a one-year moratorium on duck shooting in the United States, commencing September, 1935.

The consensus was that there is an alarming decrease in the population of the diving duck variety in Canada and the United States and that some dractic action is necessary to prevent further depletion of the ranks of the birds. Some favored a year's ban, others preferred reduction of the bag limit and cutting down the season, while still others were definitely and forcefully opposed to closing the season.

Rages Four Hours.

For four hours the discussion raged. The resolutions committee listened attentively. Tomorrow it will submit a resolution covering the waterfowl situation and consensus of the meeting.

It is believed the resolutions committee will recommend that the time is not opportune for a fair estimation of the status of wild water fowl and any decision on further hunting restrictions should be left to the judgment of the Biological Survey after its field investigation, following the next breeding season.

"I am not going to be rushed into any conclusion," said Darling. "I am going to do a square job, no matter what the Audubon Society or Rosalie Edge say about it. I intend to put this duck business on a bookkeeping basis with stock on hand governing the extent of consumption to be permitted the public."

Other Conditions Worse.

While Darling said that 90 per cent of the reports on ducks in this country are bad, conditions in other species of wild life—bison, mountain sheep, prairie chicken and deer—are even worse, with some facing extinction.

"To this day no administration in the history of this Government has considered the conservation of wild life resources from a national viewpoint," Darling declared. "Game has remained the orphan child, without asylum, and has subsisted on such crumbs as fell from the table of forestry, irrigation, reclamation and national parks.

"Do you realize that in all the millions of Government expenditure during these last three years not one thin dime was appropriated specifically for wild life restoration. Saving soil, saving trees, saving water, cutting trails and building roads were taken care of, but game was not a part of this vast program for conservation."

At the conference's annual dinner tonight Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, discussed a "new day for conservation."

Boston Pros Offer Hanley Coach Job

Mentor Prefers to Stay in Collegiate Ranks.

San Francisco, Jan. 22 (AP).—Dick Hanley, former Northwestern University football coach, has confided to friends that he has been offered a coaching post with a Boston professional eleven.

Although he expressed a preference to remain in the collegiate ranks, he said he was given until June 1 to decide whether he wanted the Boston job.

Questioned regarding his possible desire to bid for the University of Idaho head coach's job, now open, Hanley displayed little interest. Idaho is a member of the Pacific Coast Conference, but never has finished in the first division.

One-Year Ring Moratorium Proposed

Would Permit Boxers to Learn Fundamentals, Mahoney Says.

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—A one-year "closed season" on professional boxing every decade was suggested today by Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney, new president of the National Amateur Athletic Union, as a cure for the periodic doldrums into which the fight game drifts.

"If I had my way, I'd have every fight arena in the country closed down right now—closed tighter than a submarine's hatch, by Federal measure, for 12 months," said the elderly but robust barrister during a chat in his Chambers street law offices.

"That would force all the ham-and-eggers, all the shyster promoters—performers worth paying monother parasites to go to work for a while. The game would have opportunity for a much needed bath. Moreover, it would give most of the so-called boxers time to learn the fundamentals and become real boxers—performers worth paying money to see."

Chance to Develop.

The chairman of the regional labor board and former State Supreme Court justice emphasized that such a closed season also would give amateur boxers, ambitious to turn pro, a chance to develop before being enticed into rings at bootleg clubs. Time to develop physically and fistically before embarking upon a hazardous career that makes battered, punch-drunk wrecks of the poorly prepared freshmen.

This writer recently asked Mike McTigue to name the greatest boxer he ever met. Without hesitating, the former light heavyweight champion said, "Judge Mahoney. Although he was an amateur, he had everything. He was the cleverest of them all."

Mahoney learned the manly art with Teddy Roosevelt from Mike Donovan, one of the ring's greatest instructors. A fine athlete and a big fellow, Mahoney trained with Jim Jeffries 30 years ago at Asbury Park, N. J., when the latter was preparing to fight Tom Sharkey. And he met all comers in the gymnasium—McTigue, Paul Berlenbach, Billy Dodenback, et al.

He had many offers to turn professional, but preferred a legal career. Although he made the Olympic teams in 1906 and 1908 as high jumper and broad jumper, and although he led the Eastern Amateur Baseball League with a batting average of .436 in 1899, Mahoney liked boxing best and stuck to it.

Mack to Direct Foes In Senators' Opener

WHEN Bucky Harris sends his newly-acquired Nats onto the Griffith Stadium diamond in their maiden effort of the 1935 American League pennant race on April 16, the wig-wagging scorecard of Manager Connie Mack will be directing the opposition, it was revealed yesterday.

The 72-year-old Mack's Philadelphia Athletics have been scheduled as the inaugural game opponent of the Washington Club, according to the dates announced yesterday in Chicago by League President Will Harridge. Other opening games will find Chicago playing at Detroit, Clavelend at St. Louis and Boston at New York.

Washington fans thus will be the first in the league to view slugging Jimmy Foxx in his newly?adopted role of a catcher, if Mack hews to his determination to convert his home-run star from a first baseman into a backstop. Foxx broke into the majors as a catcher when he was the apple-cheeked Maryland farm boy, but made a success of his first-base job after bowing to Mickey Cochrane's superior backstopping ability.

In due time, Owner Clark Griffith will extend to President Roosevelt the annual invitation to attend the inaugural game which doubtless will be accepted by the Chief Executive, and Washington thus will become the baseball capital of the Nation on April 16.

Announcement of the complete American League schedule, already arranged, will be deferred until after the regular league schedule meeting early next month, which is in the nature of a formality to confirm the dates listed by the schedule committee.

Unlike last year, Washington will not open the American League season one day ahead of the remainder of the league cities. Only on alternate years when the Nats are scheduled to open the regular season at home does the league set aside the special opening in Washington in order to gain the prestige of the President's presence.

Opening-game opponents in the National League also were announced yesterday with April 16 set as the inaugural date. The world champion St. Louis Cardinals will be the guests of the Cubs at Chicago, the Pirates will open at Cincinnati, New York visits Boston, and Brooklyn plays in Philadelphia.

Two Tilts Sunday In Amateur Loop

Sleuths to Face Hyattsville; Sholl's Meets Celtics.

Bureau of Investigation will meet Company F of Hyattsville, and Sholl's will play the Alexandria Celtics Sunday at George Washington University's gym in the second round of the new Metropolitan Amateur Basket Ball League.

Investigation, 31 to 28 victor over Sholl's in last week's curtain-raiser, will face the Soldiers at 2:30, with the Sholl's-Celtics game scheduled an hour later.

Hyattsville is looked upon as an especially keen challenger for the title. Undefeated in 18 games, the team boasts such stars as Spider Chase and Rufus Vincent, both varsity members of the 1934 University of Maryland team.

Delaware and Hudson, fifth team in the league, will mark time Sunday.

Lasky to Be Given Own $2,500 Check

N. Y. Decides It Can Not Pick No. 1 Challenger.

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—When Art Lasky, Minneapolis heavyweight, arrives from California tomorrow to start training for his February 1 bout with James J. Braddock he will find a check for $2,500 waiting for him.

This is the check which he sent recently to the New York Boxing Commission along with his request that he be designated No. 1 challenger for Maxie Baer's title.

The commission today decided that it had no preference among the four outstanding challengers, Lasky, Schmeling, Hamas and Carnera. Accordingly, his challenger's check is being returned.

Store Builds Gym For 'Babe' Risko

To End His Training Today for Bout With Dundee.

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Eddie "Babe" Risko, the singular Syracuse middleweight, has set the pugilistic ancients to stroking their beards in amazement.

His last afternoon of hard training for his important bout with Vince Dundee Friday night in Madison Square Garden will be spent in a department store tomorrow.

Shoppers seeking the ribbon counter or food or furniture departments of one of the city's biggest establishments will see the scantily-clad Polish former sailor over in a corner whirling and darting through his routine.

A complete gym has been set up for him. Besides punching fast and heavy bags, skipping the rope, shadow boxing and going through calesthenics, he will spar eight rounds.

National League Sets '35 Openers

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—The fans of Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Chicago will have the opportunity to crack the first peanut on April 16 in the National Baseball League race this year.

Ford C. Frick, president of the senior major circuit, announced today those cities had been awarded the opening dates for 1935.

The world champion St. Louis Cardinals will collaborate with the Cubs inaugurating the season in Chicago, Pittsburgh will open in Cincinnati, the New York Giants in Boston and Brooklyn in Philadelphia.

459 Holes of Golf! Champ in Hospital

Los Angeles, Jan. 22 (AP).—Robert (Chief) Coy, Peoria, Ill., retired from the Potrero golf links to a hospital here today after setting up a marathon record of 459 holes of continuous play. He was suffering badly swollen ankles.

The best previous attested endurance golf performance on record was turned in by Bill Farnham, who played 376 holes in Guilford, Conn., in 24 hours 10 minutes last August.

Coy, who shoots in the 80's, estimated he had walked more than 100 miles over the 6,500-yard course in his more than 25 rounds of golf which lasted 39 hours. He played with one club.

Little Back on Links; Shoots 36 in Practcie

San Francisco, Jan. 22 (AP).—After a layoff since last summer when he won both the British and American amateur championships, Lawson Little, jr., toured nine holes on the Presidio Golf Course in par 36 here today to sound a warning to participants in the fifth annual match play open tournament starting Thursday.

Maloney Calls Baer Contest An 'Honor'

Neophyte Traffic Officer in Condition for Duel With Champ.

MIAMI, Jan. 22 (AP).—Police Officer Jimmy Maloney, back in the heavyweight spotlight again, today was in shape for his exhibition Thursday night with Champion Max Baer.

Jimmy is putting in his first "season" at directing traffic at one of Miami's principal street intersections. He retired from the ring two years ago.

Not only will Maloney meet the champion, but he will share the spotlight on a championship card on which Barney Ross, of Chicago, defends his junior welterweight title against the hard-hitting Frankie Klick, of California, in a 10-rounder.

Foes Finish Training.

Klick and Ross finished training today as did Tony Shucco, of Boston, and Joe Knight, of Cairo, Ga., light-heavyweight, who meet in the semifinal at 10 rounds. Buddy Baer, brother of Max, engages Frank Davenport, of Chicago, in six rounds.

It was Police Capt. W. J. McCarthy who made the match between Maloney and Baer.

"I called Jim up and asked him whether he'd fight Baer," McCarthy said. "'Sure,' he said. 'Over what distance?' I didn't want to tell him and he didn't find out 'till he signed the papers that it was only a four-round exhibition. "But he went right into training and he's in shape.

"When Jimmy came on the force I gave him a coat that would fit you and me both. I've had to get him smaller coats twice since he signed to meet Baer. He's taken off 20 pounds.

Expects No One Hurt.

Maloney said it was "only an exhibition" and that he didn't expect Baer to hurt him and he didn't expect to hurt the champion.

"I never did fight a champion while he was champion," smiled Officer Maloney, thumbing traffic along, "and I consider it a real honor.

"I met Baer the other day. He's a darned nice—pardon me."

The one-time contender strode across the glaring pavement and induced a cab driver to leave a restricted zone.

"Baer is a nice fellow," said Maloney, "and a real champion. But I wouldn't trade places with him. I've got about $75,000 left in holdings and, mister, I'm glad it's over. I like Miami and I like my job and I'm satisfied."

TECH and Western continued their neck-and-neck race for second place in the inter-high basket ball series yesterday, with the Techmen trouncing Central, 30 to 16, and the Georgetowners swamping Roosevelt, 33 to 17.

The day's play gave the series the decided aspect of being a three-team fight despite Eastern's lead, which has the Lincoln Parkers riding along in front unbeaten in three games.

Tech looked like anything but a championship team for the first half of its tussle with Central, but came back in the second half with the score tied at 11-to-11 to stage a whirlwind finish. The Maroon was a changed outfit after the intermission, sweeping aside the Blue's defense with short, fast passes to score repeatedly from under the basket and occasionally adding to the route by some accurate, long-shot marksmanship.

Mullitz Sets Pace.

Milt Mullitz, veteran guard, set the pace for Tech, finding the net four times from the floor in the second half and twice from the foul line for 10 points and individual scoring honors. The sharp-eyed guard, who wears a knee-guard on his left elbow, scored the first two baskets for Tech in the third period after Reds Daly had tallied from the foul line and the 5 points appeared to be all the Maroon needed to snap out of its lethargy.

For the first half it was anybody's game, with neither team looking any too impressive. Daly started the battle off by sinking a foul shot and Jimmy Roland and Andy Farrell followed with baskets while Willie Thompson was scoring for Central to make it 5-2 going into the second quarter.

Thompson was the male cog for Central and his second basket and three foul shots in the second period, along with fouls by Katz and Vermillion and a basket by Bill Munhall, brought the Mount Pleasanters up to the 11-11 deadlock at half-time. Another basket by Farrell, one by Billings and a foul by Daly kept Tech in the running.

Daly's eye was considerably off in the first half, but the big forward found himself in the last two periods to press Mullitz for the scoring laurels with three baskets and a foul after being held to two free shots in the initial periods.

Tech led at the end of the third period, 22 to 13, and Mullitz and Daly proceeded to stretch the lead in the final session without a let-up.

Roosevelt never threatened the Western team, which rang up its second straight win after 29 consecutive defeats. The game further stamped the Red five as a serious contender for the title. The Ruff Riders trailed, 6-4, at the end of the first quarter, 15 to 8 at the half, and 29 to 10 at the end of the third quarter. Phil Maloney was the big gun for the Red team, holding Roosevelt's ace forward, Spiro Kolius, to one basket and snaring 11 points on the side.

Ice, His Medium to Fame, Ruins Bialis' Hopes to Skate Again

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Jan. 22 (AP).—Ice, his medium to fame, has snatched all hopes of further skating glory from Valentine Bialis.

But tonight doctors attending the Utica, N. Y., skating champion, who lost a leg yesterday as a result of an automobile accident on ice-glazed highways, said he would live.

In a hospital here, the three-times member of the Olympic skating team had clung to life precariously, but with the same grit that made him a champion, throughout last night and today. Doctors said his tenacity had again won him the battle.

Last night the 35-year-old athlete was returning with some companions by automobile from Minneapolis, where he had competed in Olympic tryouts a few days ago.

The highways were glazed with ice. Bialis, the driver, saw the headlight of a train. He jammed the brakes, but the car skidded. Bialis and John Buehler, 20, of Saranac, N. Y., jumped. Their other companion, Marvin Conover, 20, Fort Johnson, N. Y., stuck with the machine as it crashed into the train.

Bialis, in his leap, slipped on the ice and under the wheels of the train. His right leg was severed. The other youths were unhurt. Weak from loss of blood, Bialis was brought to a hospital here and rushed into an operating room.

Nekolny Still Is Just a Jiggler, Gallico Finds at Bout in Rome

By Paul Gallico.

ROME, Jan. 16 (via mail).—It is sort of like a breath from home when you are attending a boxing match in a strange country (as I frequently do, being an incurable ring worm) to find a pugilist with whom one has a nodding acquaintance, to see some face that one has observed being punched in the home rings.

Thus, the other evening, imagine my surprise when at the Reunione Pugilistica in the ancient Teatro Jovinelli to see none other than Franta Nekolny climb into the ring to absorb his accustomed licking. I am sure that many of you will recall Nekolny, who was known during his brief, but not particularly successful stay in America, sometimes as the "Jiggling Jugoslav" and the "Bum Czech." He made a rather inauspicious New York debut at Madison Square Garden, gravitated thence to the St. Nicholas and the other small clubs, roamed about the hinterlands, boxing occasionally and finally vanished completely from the scene.

Nekolny came to the United States from Czechoslovakia well press-agented. Facially he resembled Ace Hudkins, but the resemblance went no further. He seemed to be a nice little red-headed foreigner, a welterweight verging on the middleweight class. His manager promised that he would be a sensation, that he was durable beyond all description and kept moving from one bell to the other with never a pause.

Dutifully I went to Madison Square Garden to the unveiling of the new European prodigy. It was true that he kept moving from the clang of the bell to the end of the round but, as it was described immediately, strangely in the horizontal plane. He jiggled up and down. He jiggled his shoulders, his arms, his waist, his nose and his

Hank MacTavish Triumphs at Hialeah to Pay $302.10 Mutuel

3-Year-Old Barely Beats Brindle

Marching Home Victor in Feature; Porter Is Fined $100.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Well-beaten in two previous starts this year, Hank MacTavish, a 3-year-old owned by Axton and Scheuerman, made a grand comeback for the long-shot players here today, winning the one-mile fourth race to return a stunning $302.10 mutuel.

Jockey Cal Rainey rode the gelding, which prior to the two starts this season, was beaten off at Latonia. One race behind that, at the same track, however, he won in the role of favorite.

The finish of today's event was very close and Brindle appeared to have collared the rank outsider right on the wire. Show Boy was third, a length and a half behind. Hank MacTavish jumped to the front just after the start and made all his own pace.

The mutuels department reported that in all, $79 was wagered to win on the horse and $103 altogether. This included 31 $2-dollar tickets; six combination tickets and one $5 straight ticket. The gelding paid $99.10 for place and $32.90 for show.

Marching Home Wins.

Three-year-old fillies were given the honored position on today's card. Eleven went postward in the Top Flight Purse of 6 furlongs, named after C. V. Whitney's great filly. The Middleburg Stable's Marching Home, $4.20 favorite, won her second purse in a row, passing the judges a half-length before E. R. Bradley's Bay Sister. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Basquine was third three lengths away. The time was 1:12 4-5.

The winner, the third horse and Last Time, which finished just out of the money, are eligible for the Florida Derby.

Marching Home was kept close behind the pace cut out by Vanished for about half the journey, when Pascuma called on the Middleburg miss and she flashed into a wide advantage. The daughter of John P. Grier entered the last furlong five lengths clear and Pasquma eased up. Bay Sister and Basquine, both slow to find their strides, made up a world of ground. The former finished fastest of all, while Basquine had to escape from tight quarters on the back stretch.

Porter Call Victor.

Porter Call, a 3-year-old that had not started since last September at Aqueduct, turned up a good thing in the six furlongs of the opening contest. Hard ridden by Eddie Litzenberger, the gelding came from far off the pace late in the stretch and wore down Liberty Oak to register by a half length, paying better than 4-to-1. Liberty Oak had to race Proteus into submission, but held on to save the place by nearly two lengths from Victorium.

Clapping Jane, a filly, found the right spot in the juvenile event. Favorite at $5.10 for $2, the daughter of Claptrap-Airy Jane broke fast from her outside position, then darted to the inside and interfered with several other youngsters in doing so. She went on to win by two lengths. Seabiscuit staged a strong finish that beat Sparta by a half-length for the place. Little Nymph, the second choice, had a rough trip but finished fourth.

Jockey Porter Fined.

After the race the following ruling was issued by the stewards:

"Jockey E. Porter is fined $100 for permitting his mount, Clapping Jane, in second race of this date, to cross from the outside of the track to the inside in front of his field, though clear of the other horses. Riders must maintain a straight course down the 2-3 ear-old stretch chute. Future offenses of this character will be dealt with more severely."

Fred Almy, close second choice to Douglas F., picked up the early leaders in the third event and made the grade in the closing strides. Six horses finished half-lengths art. Dove of Peace, which tossed off a long lead, lasted to earn second money from Luculent. Wedding Ring, Gay Crest and Herowin also finished close up. Douglas F. never could get up. Fred Almy returned $7.

Brass Monkey, $5.10, took the finale by two lengths from Midshipman, with Xandra third.

Amateurs Win Grand Circuit Proposal

Dash Events to Be Added This Year, Stewards Vote at Session.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 22 (AP).—A new attraction for grand circuit patrons—amateur races—will be inaugurated this season, stewards of the Grand Circuit Racing Association decided at their annual meeting today.

E. Roland Harriman, of New York, who was reelected president, said the innovation had been requested by amateur horsemen.

One or two of the amateur races, which are expected to prove popular among socialite horse-breeders, will be included in each day's racing, Harriman said. Dash events made a hit with patrons last season, and they will be numerous this year, he predicted.

Expect Good Year.

"We expect the most successful grand circuit season in years," Harriman said. "The depression seems to be over from the harness-racing point of view. Last season, the attendance was larger, the races cleaner, and the finishes closer than in years, and the members present today expect this to stimulate the 1935 metings."

Legalization of betting, the president said, has undoubtedly aided the sport. With the exception of New York, all States in which 1935 meetings will be held have legalized parimutuel betting, and in New York, private bookmaking is permitted.

Dates awarded for 1935 are Toledo, June 29 to July 5; Cleveland, July 6 to 13; Toronto, July 17 to 25; Boston, July 29 to August 10; Goshen, August 12 to 17; Springfield, Ill., August 19 to 24; Syracuse, August 26 to 30; Indianapolis, September 2 to 7, and Lexington, September 21 to 28.

California's Plans Hit Agua Caliente

U. S. Tracks Get Dates in Conflict With Mexican.

Los Angeles, Jan. 22 (AP).—Racing plans of Agua Caliente, Mex., were dealt a severe and perhaps fatal blow by the California Horse Racing Board today when it awarded dates to Santa Anita Park, Bay Meadows and Tanforan in direct conflict to the advertised program from February 24 to March 31 of the Lower California resort.

Over the protests of San Diego, Calif., and the Agua Caliente Jockey Club, the current Santa Anita meeting was prolonged two weeks to March 9. Bay Meadows was ordered to open its spring meeting within a week from that time for 30 days' duration, with Tanforan following.

The schedule would complete the 150 days of racing in the State the commission had promised Eastern thoroughbred owners last August.

Lou Anger, general manager of the below-the-border track, said he was not prepared to state immediately whether Agua Caliente would attempt to go ahead with its proposed meeting.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 22.

We will skip lightly over the fact that Fred Almy, Marching Home and Brass Monkey came buck-jumping home in front for the Bennings public today. Clocker Mike was around the press box after the fourth race today, telling me about the great hunch he had on Hank MacTavish, the nag that paid $302, the longest price of the meeting. He said his maternal and paternal grandfathers were called Hank for short, but he figured nothing by the name of MacTavish would ever pay $302 for anything, much less a $2 ticket. Trainer Joe was around this morning telling about the railroad crossing incident a friend of his figured in last night. His friend was driving here from the North and was racing a train to the crossing. "Well, did he get across?" I asked Joe. "No," said Joe, "but they're making him one." I'll be seein' ya tomorrow. BILL.

First race—James City has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in the day's opener. He has a pair of neat seconds to his credit and a good ride by Jockey Hunter will complete the picture. Deep Run is said to be a brisk worker and one that will not linger long in the maiden ranks. Higher Cloud to take care of the others.

Second race—Quickly, with Bobby Watson in the saddle, may be ready to run her real race here. Her Tropical form was good and she has turned in a smart trial lately. Golden Way might have something to say regarding the purse distribution should he see action. Frederick is as sharp as a tack and will not be far out of it.

Third race—Trey may be ready to spring a surprise on a field of this sort. At top now, he will have Wayne Wright to do the riding and the inside post may help. Golden Fate is fit and ready and is hard to figure worse than second. Cathop turned in a neat effort to win at the other track and is dangerous.

Fourth race—Kawagoe has been kidding us of late and I can't believe this fellow is the same horse that took the best sprinters with regularity in Maryland. Breaks off the rail tomorrow and, with Hunter up, I expect no mistakes. Larranga went well last out and should save the place from Bold Lover. Mike likes All Forlorn.

Fifth race—Garden Message appears capable of holding this field safe. He was second to a track-equaling race here last week and should be at his best. Pot au Brooms is asked to carry top weight, but will be a factor. Howard will draw heavy backing, but I favor the other two.

Sixth race—Hogan's Fox is a rather shifty sort as he exhibited at Tropical Park. Wright has been engaged for the saddle work and I want to see action. Hardware is a possibility. This one was impeded in his last race. Towson's last was a beaut.

Seventh race—Gifted Lady gets in light and she was literally flying at the finish of her last outing. She might go well at this route. Broken Up and Air Line to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Octaroro won a sprint over at the other course and may surprise by going this mile and an eighth in excellent fashion. Flaming Light won his last and may come back with another smashing race. Cousin George for the show.

PORTER CALL got away well and, rated along, came around field entering stretch, closed gamely, but had to be driven hard to win. LIBERTY OAK was used up racing PROTEUS into defeat and tired near the finish. VICTORIUM was forced to go wide for the entire trip, and came with a rush in final furlongs. JAKOVIA ran a good race. GENERAL A. was never a factor. PROTEUS displayed keen speed, but stopped to a walk in final sixteenth. WATERSET lacked speed.

CLAPPING JANE broke from the outside, crossed over to the inside, interfering with several horses, then drew away, but was driving to win. SEABISCUIT came with a rush in final furlong, and was a fast-going second. SPARTA was bothered some in early part, but ran a good race. LITTLE NYMPH got away fast, but was crowded in early part and again at the finish, and was forced to take up abruptly. BERRY PATCH showed good early speed. SURRY had a rough trip.

Catholic U. Five Spurts in Last Half to Defeat LaSalle, 33-24

Lieb's Clever Shots Seal Victory

Lanky Center Scores 12 Points as Cardinals Gain Revenge.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S Cardinals warbled a throaty tune of victory last night as they finally succeeded in wringing a 33-24 victory out of a stubborn and clever little LaSalle quintet after five previous attempts had ended disastrously. It was ample revenge for the 29-24 setback the Brooklanders took in Philadelphia earlier in the season.

It was a closer game than the score indicates. Held well under control in the first half, it became a serious menace to C. U.'s victory hopes in the final chukker. But the lanky, methodical form of big Bernie Lieb extricated the Redbirds from their embarrassing predicament when LaSalle began to hit the hoop too frequently.

Catholic had the situation in hand at the half by the familiar football figures of 13-6. LaSalle tried ineffectively to pierce the close-knitted Redbirds' defense and failed to score until 10 minutes of time had elapsed. Catholic, meanwhile, jumped into a 7-0 lead with its slow-motion method of setting up shots.

Lieb Paces Scorers.

Lieb, who led the scoring with 12 points, tallied only once in the first half, and then on a charity throw, but he took matters into his own hands after LaSalle tied the count at 13-all soon after the final period opened.

The big center put C. U. in front again, 15-13, with a jumping-revolving shot on a pass from Augusterfer, and came right back for another after Schmarr sank a foul, sending C. U. ahead, 18-13. But to make it more binding he slipped a pass to Gearty for another basket.

Capt. Ed Barr's long shots, and another by Mosicant, brought LaSalle to within 6 points of C. U., 20-26, before Lieb broke through and pushed in another. But McGrath's long one kept pace for LaSalle, forcing Lieb to score his prettiest shot of the evening—a neat overhand toss on the dead run from the corner. Two successful foul tries by the same thorn in LaSalle's collective side broke up the ball game.

G. U. Prep Opposes St. Alban's Today

Roosevelt Meets St. John's; Eastern vs. Episcopal.

Renewal of the rivalry between Georgetown Prep and St. Alban's occupies an important position on today's scholastic basket ball program. The two prep schools tangle at Garrett Park at 3:30 p. m., but the result will have no bearing on the private school court standings due to St. Alban's nonmembership in the league.

In the only game in the city proper, Roosevelt meets St. John's at Roosevelt at 3:30 p. m., while Eastern journeys to Episcopal for a work-out with that school this afternoon at the same hour. Washington-Lee High faces the strong Bethesda-Chevy Chase High five tonight at Ballston at 8 p. m.

Little Generals Escape Defeat by Slight Margin

Ballston, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.)—Believing it already had clinched the game, Washington and Lee High School made the mistake of sending in its second team in the last few minutes of its inter-league suburban contest with Hyattsville High tonight, and had a narrow escape from defeat. The Little Generals won, 38-35, after leading 22-13 at the turn.

Form Unlimited Five.

A number of former high school and college players have formed an unlimited basket ball team to be known as the Western A. C. Among those on the squad are Jerry O'Conner, Georgetown's runner-up to Ed Hargaden for the Eastern Conference scoring honors last year; Joe Holpawn, Northwestern; Dave Feldman, Oregon State; John O'Connor, Georgetown; Chism, Roosevelt High, and Forney, Western High. For games, call Manager Holpawn, West 2699-J.

Cutter, Potential Ring Champ, Prefers Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 22 (AP). A professional ring career may appeal to some, but Slade Cutter prefers the Navy.

And so, boxing loses a potential heavyweight champion.

The young midshipman from Oswego, Ill., is regarded as perhaps the best college fighter in America.

"He has everything needed to become a great professional fighter," said Spike Webb, Navy's rotund little ring mentor.

"I handled Tunney when he was on his way to the United States Army championship during the war days," Spike said, "and I'll tell you, Tunney didn't have half as much on the ball as Cutter."

He adds: "You'll recall that Tunney became heavyweight champion of the world. Slade is 35 pounds heavier, punches harder with both hands, and can take it."

A former professional, Webb has been close to the game for years and knows a gold nugget when he sees one. He has coached the Naval Academy fighters—always one of the best college units—for many seasons, and also has tutored the United States Olympic battlers.

Slade has the best record of any college fighter—best because it is perfect. He has had 18 ring contests and has never been whipped. This two-fisted scrapper is 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighs 220 pounds.

But fighting doesn't appeal to him as a profession and he'll probably swap his boxing gloves for an ensign's rank in Uncle Sam's Navy when he is graduated in June.

Cutter probably is better known to the sports public as a star tackle. It was his place-kick that beat Army in the sailor-soldier gridiron battle at Philadelphia last fall.

Hargaden Hurt But May Play Saturday

Carnegie to Bring Rangy, Veteran Team Here Next Week-End.

GEORGETOWN makes its annual bid for an improved rating in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference Saturday night at Tech High School, where Coach Fred Mesmer's men clash with Carnegie Tech.

But a pall of gloom was cast over the Hoya camp yesterday as Capt. Ed Hargaden topped off a strenuous session with a slightly sprained ankle. Hargaden tripped after sinking a snowbird in scrimmage.

The injury is not thought to be serious, however, and he will be under Trainer Harry Crowley's wing the remainder of the week.

Temple Loses Rosan.

Temple's loss of Red Rosan, high-scoring guard, apparently will hurt the Owls' championship hopes. Temple has lost two successive league games and ranks third behind West Virginia and Pittsburgh. Georgetown and Carnegie are deadlocked for fourth.

Tech will bring a rangy and veteran team to Washington for the Georgetown game. Ed Fitzwilson, center, and Hugh James, reserve forward are 6 feet 6 and 7 inches tall, respectively, and all of the first five hit the 6-foot mark.

Ted Riggs, a guard, was selected on the All-Conference team last season, and Morry Patt, his running mate, was first-string quarterback on the football team. Joe Macalka and Simon Felser will start at forward. Felser, Fitzwilson and Patt are sophomores.

May Be Wide Open.

Should Pitt top the unbeaten West Virginia team Saturday, and it has an excellent chance of doing so, the race will be a wide-open affair with Pittsburgh back on top of the heap after being away from that position for a month. The league standings:

11 Court Teams Enter West Virginia Tourney

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). Eleven teams have arranged to take part in the West Virginia Intercollegiate Conference championship basket ball tournament starting here March 21

Only two conference members, Marshall and Morris Harvey Colleges, failed to enter, but decided against participation only because their floor seasons close on March 2. The participating schools will be Davis and Elkins, West Virginia Wesleyan, Salem, Alderson-Broaddus and Concord, Fairmont, Glenville, New River, Potomac, Shepherd and West Liberty State Colleges.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.). With only night games scheduled, the third annual southern West Virginia independent basket ball tournament has been set for February 18-22 at St. Albans.

Heurich's Face Pittsburgh Pro Five

Question of How to Seat 2,000 Fans Worries Sportsman.

WHETHER professional basket ball has enough drawing power to attract another capacity crowd to Chris Heurich's new gymnasium will be decided Sunday when the Heurich Brewers face the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Willigs.

Some 1,600 fans having attended last Sunday's dedicatory ceremonies and watched the Brewers bow to the Newark Mules, 43-34, Heurich is expecting another healthy turnout, what with the Smoky City boys boasting of an aggregation of six-footers from such colleges as Pittsburgh, Duquesne, Westminister, Penn State and Waynesburg.

But what is worrying the young sportsman who built the new athletic emporium is how to accommodate spectators if 2,000 want to storm through the turnstiles Sunday. The gym has a seating capacity of 1,400. At least 200 others were packed together like sardines in a can watching the Newark-Heurich proceedings.

College Captains.

Eight of the nine Pittsburgh pros were former college captains. Don Smith, one of Pitt's basket ball immortals, All-American guard in 1933, and Timmy Lawry, also of Pitts., whose field goal in the last few seconds of play snapped a 29-game winning streak of Notre Dame in the Hoosiers' battle in 1830, are two of the invading stars. Others are Peck Minnick, coach, formerly of Cleveland Rosenblooms; Fred Crum, who has averaged 14 points per game; Phil Rice, Frank Janoski, Rab Currie, Noddy McFarlane, Frank Evanoski and Red Brand.

Heurich's team plans to flash a much better brand of basket ball than heretofore, now that the players have a gym. Before, it was a case of holding only one workout a week, and by the time the big game came around it would take the Brewers 20 minutes to warm up.

Maryland Faces Hopkins Tonight

Starting Time Is Moved Up Because of Exams.

Maryland and Johns Hopkins add another notch to their long series of athletic duels tonight at College Park, where they meet in basket ball at 7:30 o'clock. Starting time has been moved up to give the Terrapins additional time to prepare for examinations beginning tomorrow.

On a basis of past performances, a Hopkins-Maryland game does not seem important, inasmuch as Maryland has won 10 of 14 games. But the Blue Jays have the annoying habit of winning when least expected, as their first game last year attests.

Hopkins won a 37-32 decision last year in an overtime game at Baltimore, but the Terps balanced the scales with a 32-19 win on their home floor.

Browning Mat Duel to Mark New Local Peak for George

UNCONCERNED by the prospects that he may be taken for a ride by Jim Browning's celebrated airplane scissors hold, Ed Don George tomorrow night again will risk his claims to the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world.

George has been risking his championship claims every other night since the evening two years ago when he deposited Gus Sonnenberg on a Boston mat to inherit the stray ends of the championship claims which had not been gathered in by Jim Londos, lineal heir to the championship.

Never before, however, has George been matched before a Washington audience with such worthy opposition as Browning represents. For a time last year, Browning was the duly-appointed crown prince of the Londos dynasty, losing to Londos only before ball park crowds in New York.

It is in anticipation of the novel experience of seeing Browning's shoulders pinned to a Washington mat that Capital wrestling fans are rallying to the banner of Promoter Joe Turner who is scenting a moderate return to wrestling's golden days of 1931 when he turned 'em away at the gates with great delight.

Browning has never been thoroughly extended in a Washington bout and actually boasts a local record superior to George, according to Turner's press agent who points out that George has lost falls to both Tor Johanson and George Zaharias here.

With pardonable pride, perhaps, Turner last night announced a full set of preliminary bouts calculated to provide the full quota of thrills. As his peak offering of the supporting card, Turner has booked the redoubtable Rudy Dusek, of the Oklahoma Duseks, against one Eli Fischer, former Rutgers football star, in a 45-minute time limit affair.

In 30-minute bouts, Karl Pojelo, once a main-eventer, meets Stan Sokolis, and Mayes McLain will operate on the indelicate chassis of Little Beaver.

From the Turner offices also comes the announcement that "despite the expense of the show," women fans accompanied by paying escorts will be admitted "absolutely" free.

Terrors Take Decision in Ring Duel

Open Boxing Season With 6-2 Triumph Over Bucknell Team.

WESTMINSTER, Md., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—One knockout, three decisions, a forfeiture by Bucknell of the bout in the 115-pound class, and a point scored on two draws, gave Western Maryland 6 points to Bucknell's 2 as the Terrors opened their 1935 boxing season here tonight.

The feature bout of the evening was in the 175-pound class when Pethick of Bucknell was awarded the decision over Capt. Gorski, undefeated Western Maryland veteran and intercollegiate champion in 1934. The decision surprised Pethick as well as the 1,200 spectators.

Referee Pop Goddard, in explaining his decision, said that Gorski won the first round, but, in the second, Pethick sent a right to Gorski's chin that nearly knocked out the Western Maryland star. This blow, the umpire said, was probably missed by most of the spectators. The third round, which the referee said was close to a draw, was awarded to Bucknell.

The only knockout of the evening was made in the 145-pound bout, by Haynes of Western Maryland, who dropped Lose of Bucknell with a right to the chin.

Bird Dogs Point Noses Southward

Grand Junction, Tenn., Jan. 22 (AP).—A 22,000-acre estate, equipped with its own quail hatchery and steam heated kennels, is being made ready for the premier event of the field trial year—the national bird dog championship.

The cream of the bird dog crop of America will be brought to Grand Junction on February 25 for this annual "tournament of noses," in which only blue ribbon winners are eligible to participate.

The plantation is the property of Hobart Ames, a Bostonian, and nationally known sports figure.

The dogs will compete for the purse of $1,500 and the National Championship Loving Cup.

Cruickshank Lands Fish—$105 Worth!

Richmond, Jan. 22 (AP).—Bobby Cruickshank, golfdom's wee Scott, has always wanted a sailfish, but 7 feet of sailfish at $15 a foot—that's an awful lot of money.

Bobby, who picked up more than $3,000 in the winter golf wars, related today how he landed his sailfish after a 40-minute struggle. It's true, Bobby confessed, that he hooked the fish in the tail but, after all, no one need ever know about that.

"I wanted to have him mounted," he said. "So I asked the hotel proprietor about it. He said he could fix it up easily—said folks had them mounted often. So I asked how much it cost. He said $15 a foot—and my sailfish was 7 feet long."

Bobby sighed. "The sailfish is still in Florida."

Temple Finds C. U. Ring Jinx

Has Yet to Win in Series; Invades Saturday.

TEMPLE'S boxing team, that comes to Washington Saturday night for another match with Catholic U., has never whipped the Cardinal glove artists in a series of four matches. C. U. first began winning from the Owls in 1929 when Jack Malevich and a host of other immortals were grinding out decisions for Coach Ed LaFond's teams.

This will be Temple's first match of the season, and with Danny Payne, Fred Mix and Sally Grecco back in the Cardinal line-up the omens point to another Catholic U. victory. Dave Beloff, who has handled Temple boxing squads for ten years, is again at the helm and still hoping to upset the Brooklanders.

Several members of Pop Warner's undefeated Temple football team will make their debut in the ring Saturday. The list includes Bill Davidson, half back, who will fight in the 165-pound class, and Ed Montgomery, 175-pound center, who is matched with Red Fleming.

Past battles between the schools always have been fast and gruelling, as the scores will attest. The results, with C. U. winning all matches are 1929, 5 to 2, and ditto for 1930; 1931, 4½ to 2½, and ditto for 1932. No match was scheduled last year.

Goettling Asks Furr's Share; Stirs Row

Seeks Commission's Aid After Turner Turns Back on Demand.

WITH the District Boxing Commission adopting a hands-off policy, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday found himself projected into the midst of the contractual squabbling of Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, and his manager, Dr. William Goettling.

Displaying his contract with Furr which called for all purse money to be paid to him as manager, Dr. Goettling yesterday requested that the Boxing Commission order Promoter Turner to turn over to him the $300 which represented Furr's share of the gate in his fight with Johnny Jadick last Monday night.

Under his contract, Dr. Goettling receives one-third of all purse money earned by Furr, but he is claiming Furr's entire purse for the Jadick fight in return for money he says he has advanced Furr.

Turner Refuses Plea.

Promoter Turner yesterday refused to pay Dr. Goettling the full amount of Furr's purse despite civil action threatened by Goettling, who has retained an attorney. Today, Turner again will offer Goettling his one-third share of the purse, the remaining two-thirds of which he will pay to Furr, and these terms he expects Goettling to accept.

Speaking for the District Boxing Commisison, Secretary Harvey L. Miller pointed out that Commission Chairman Lucien Van Doren had refused Goettling's plea to place the money in escrow with the commission until his claims against Furr could be threshed out in court.

"Disposition of such money is not the function of the commission, Mr. Van Doren stated," said Miller. "The Boxing Commission is not a collection agency and must necessarily adopt a hands-off policy in such matters."

Once friendly, Goettling purchased managerial rights from Furr for $100 after the latter had obtained his release from a contract with Harry Grove for that sum. The contract expires in July.

Sarron in First Battle Here Since '34

Meets Rivers, His Former Sparring Partner, Next Monday.

FOR the first time since Washington fight fans saw him groveling on the canvas at Griffith Stadium last summer after the impact of a vicious foul punch delivered by Benny Bass, they will glimpse Petey Sarron in action next Monday night when he meets up with California Joe Rivers in a fight scheduled for 10 rounds or less.

The lay-off represents Sarron's longest period of inactivity since he started climbing the fistic ladder after winning a place as alternate on the United States Olympic boxing team of 1928. On his return to the ring, Sarron finds himself confronted with a former sparring partner whose rise in local rings has been nothing less than sensational.

The swarthy Rivers, who will enter the ring at odds no worse than even money, has rocketed from a preliminary boy to a main-bout fighter here in less than six weeks after he shook the dust of California from his brogans. One fight as a preliminary lad served to establish him in a feature role.

Knocked Out Dougan.

After knocking out Leroy Dougan in five rounds, Dougan's first knockout in a local ring, Rivers gained employment as a sparring partner for Sarron while the latter trained for his bout with Eddie Burl. When Sarron received injuries in training that forced him to withdraw from the match, Rivers was given the assignment against Burl by Matchmaker Cornell with more hope than justification.

Rivers promptly proceeded to justify whatever faith Cornell might have had in his fistic ability by battering Burl into a terrific defeat in 10 rounds and instantly established himself as a contender for whatever featherweight honors Sarron holds. In beating Burl, Rivers disposed of the man who has beaten Sarron once, lost once and fought one draw in three fights with the Syrian.

Wheat Values Still Lag on Gold Case Fear

Cotton Prices Decline 5 to 10 Points; May Sells at 12.51.

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP).—Another dip in the grain market today carried wheat prices down a major fraction. Easiness at Liverpool and Winnipeg influenced some selling here but there was no aggressive pressure in the pits.

Market weakness was attributed to lack of buying power rather than to liquidation. Monetary uncertainty in connection with supreme court consideration of validity of gold clause abrogation was largely responsible for a disposition on the part of many traders to await developments. Price fluctuations, holding to a narrow range after the early decline, betrayed nervousness.

Wheat closed at a ½ to ¾ cent loss from Monday's finish; May, 97⅛-¼; corn, was ⅝ to ⅞ down; May, 86-86⅛; oats, ⅛ to ⅝ lower; rye, ⅛ to ⅞ off and barley unchanged to 1¼ down. In the last six trading days May wheat has worked to a net loss of 1 cent while May corn has dropped more than 2 cents.

A report from a foreign source concerning rumors that Canada might attempt to export its wheat surplus with the help of a government export subsidy of 15 cents a bushel attracted much attention and gave rise to fear that such a course would disturb the world market. Subsequently a leading grain house received a message from Winnipeg suggesting the minimum price pegs there would not be changed, and just before the closing bell here word came from the same source which earlier had relayed the subsidy rumor that there was no substantiation of truth in the gossip.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Cotton prices were easier today, with trading less active. The general market closed steady at net declines of 5 to 10 points.

First prices were 6 to 13 points lower in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and reported reactions in the Bombay market.

Exports today, 9,687 bales, making 2,862,371 bales so far this season. Port receipts, 10,056 bales. United States port stocks, 2,921,395 bales.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil closed easy today at net declines of 15 to 16 points. Business was not as active as recently, with a turnover of 67 contracts. The setback in lard, where losses of 12 to 22 points were established, and the rather easy position of the grain markets, seemed to unsettle sentiment. Crude oil was firmer, however, at 9¾ cents bid in the Southeast, Valley and Texas. Bleachable spot nominal; January closed 10.95; March and May, 11.05; July, 11.06.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Leading gold currencies continued to decline moderately against the dollar in world exchange markets today, while the pound sterling stiffened.

In London the dollar was soft at 4.88 5-16 to the pound sterling, and in New York the British unit gained ⅛ of a cent at $4.88⅜.

While the dollar was easy in Paris at the equivalent of 6.576 cents to the French franc, the trend was reversed in New York dealings, where the franc was .00⅛ of a cent lower at 6.57⅞ cents.

In New York guilders at 67.39 cents declined .03 of a cent, belgas were .11 of a cent lower at 23.27 cents, and Swiss francs lost .06 of a cent at 32.27 cents.

Number of Trade Associations Now Consider Return to Type of Information Exchange Activity Popular Ten Years Ago; Laid to NRA Price Control Policy.

New York, January 22.—A number of trade associations are now considering a return to the type of activity which was typical of such organizations ten years or so ago, before it became popular to resort to direct efforts to curb competition and maintain prices in an industry. This means that trade promotion, research and interchange of technical information will again become the chief work of these business bodies.

This tendency to return to the earlier trade association pattern is a direct result of the critical attitude of the National Recovery Administration towards price control and many fair trade practice provisions in the codes. It reflects also fear that the NIRA will be revised so as to bar from it many types of restraint of trade when Congress acts to extend the life of that measure beyond June 16 of this year. The decision of the Supreme Court holding the oil control section of the law unconstitutional also has created fear that legislative sanctions for restricting competition through the codes may not be forthcoming when the whole NRA program is subject to ultimate legal test before the Supreme Court.

Some of the trades in which this renaissance of the older type of trade association is being planned never were able to obtain approval for codes of their own from the NRA. Others have found that the codes have been effective chiefly in the field of labor relations, so that a strong trade association is desirable for other purposes. In still other instances, however, it is said that, while the code brought concrete results, it is feared that the NRA as an agency for industrial self-regulation will soon be definitely a dead letter.

Business Men Said to Doubt Utility of Competitive Pacts.

Some of these trade association executives point out that business men in many lines are coming to doubt seriously either the value of or their ability to enforce agreements among competitiors to curb their rivalry by trade practice provisions. In certain instances, in fact, it is apparent that the swing of the pendulum has proceeded a very substantial distance in the direction of "rugged individualism" in trade relations. Some forward-looking trade association executives accordingly begin to foresee a time when, with cooperative efforts to curb competition of the sort that has been so popular for the past decade abandoned, their organizations might presently find themselves without useful functions and in danger of decay, if not of extinction. Hence the effort on their part to revive interest in and support for the older type of trade association activity, which proved useful prior to the rise of the current era of "industrial self-government."

Many of the trade associations taking this attitude will not entirely abandon agreements concerning trade practices, their executives say. There are some provisions in the existing codes which are regarded as helpful and quite unobjectionable from the legal point of view. These doubtless will be continued. The emphasis in association work, however, will be very definitely shifted away from such matters to what are termed more traditional or orthodox trade organization activity among the groups here referred to.

Many Express View What Is Wanted Is Simplified Code.

At the same time, it should be said that quite different views are entertained by numerous other associations, including a number that are most in the public eye, such as those in the foods and textile industries. Here, the view is advanced that recent developments, including the oil decision of the Supreme Court, will strengthen rather than weaken effective self-government in industry. The opinion is expressed by them that what is wanted is simplified codes which command support from the large concerns in the trade, and which can be left largely to the trades themselves to enforce. Recent events, they feel, have had the effect of making Administration authorities more willing to see this kind of program adopted.

Those who take this position do not greatly fear Senator Borah and his colleagues in Congress, who want to go back to anti-trust law enforcement. They feel that Congress will pass a simplified statute, and one in a form which will meet the Supreme Court's objections to section 9(c) of the existing law, the old control provision, which was declared unconstitutional.

Whenever Congress passes a new NRA law, therefore, a number of trades will seek to withdraw from the effort to enforce fair trade practice provisions through codes, and will prefer to revert to the earlier type of trade association work concerned with raising technical standards and improving efficiency by exchange of information, etc. In other industries, simplified codes with less attention to the small concern and enforcement as regards it will be sought.

Bond Market Turns Mixed; Federals Up

U. S. Loans in Demand; Sales Volume Rises to $13,429,000.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—United States Government bonds were in broad demand in today's listed market and several Treasury issues established new 1934-35 highs. Corporate loans were less active, but prices were fairly well maintained.

Resumption of the advance in Treasury bonds, interrupted somewhat by apprehension over outcome of the gold-clause cases now before the Supreme Court, was accompanied by reports that a number of life insurance companies and other large investors had entered the market again and were especially interested in the shorter-term loans.

Treasury Issues Up.

Eight of the various Treasury issues established new highs, including the 3½s of 1934, up 7-32ds at 103.27 and the 3⅜s of 1940, up ⅛ of a point at 105.28. Liberties were quiet and only slightly changed, while Home Owners Loan 3s advanced 5-32ds at 100.12.

Corporate bonds were less uniform in price movements, although a few standard investments went through their old highs, including Armour & Co., 5½s, up ⅝ at 104⅛; Bell Telephone 5s, up ⅞ at 119; Cincinnati Union Terminal 4½s, up 1 point at 110, and Norfolk & Western 4s, up ½ at 112.

Some of the active railroad issues sold fractionally lower, including obligations of the Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Union Station, Delaware & Hudson and Union Pacific.

Rail Issues Lower.

The Associated Press average for 20 railroads was .12 of a point lower at 86.88, while that for 10 industrials was .18 of a point higher at 95.49 and that for 10 low-yield bonds advanced .05 of a point to a new 1934-35 high at 108.65.

In the lower-priced group, advances up to a point were shown by obligations of International Telephone, Postal Telegraph, Portland Gas & Electric, Utah Power & Light, Warner-Quinlan, and Detroit Edison.

Bush Terminal 5s were 3⅝ points higher at 47⅝. Declines of around a point occurred in issues of Chicago & Northwestern, Container Co., Kelly-Springfield, Wabash and Western Pacific.

The foreign section was quiet and featureless.

Transfers in all departments aggregated $13,429,000, par value, compared with $11,575,000 on Monday.

Leading Farm Products Point To Recovery After Weakness

U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics.

Leading farm products have shown tendency to recover from mid-month weakness and irregularity, and there were net price gains for some lines of butter, eggs, and poultry the third week of January.

Grains and feeds regained part of their earlier losses, but cash corn, rye and oats were depressed by arrival of imports and still sold 2 cents to 4 cents a bushel below levels of the week before. Net price changes for cash wheat were small.

Feeds lost $1 to $2 per ton with light demand. Livestock sold mostly lower under increased supply. Fruits and vegetables continued the draggy, uneven market course of the past few weeks.

Cotton Slightly Lower.

Prices of spot cotton fluctuated considerably during the third week of January, and tone was rather weak, but net declines were slight. Following the official announcement that the national quota under the Bankhead act would be 10,500,000 bales of 500 pounds of lint cotton for the 1935 season, cotton prices advanced sharply, but most of the advance was soon lost.

Sales of spot cotton continued small, and inquiries for domestic and foreign account were less numerous. Although the daily rate of domestic mill consumption in December was slightly lower than in November, cloth production during the first half of January indicates some increase in the rate of mill activity and domestic mill stocks continued low.

Cotton cloth markets were less active with prices somewhat lower. Exports for the week increased somewhat.

Domestic cash wheat markets were weak, reflecting weakness in foreign markets and uncertainty as to the court decision on the monetary question. Marketings remained relatively light. Mills experienced some difficulty in obtaining supplies and paid premiums for heavy weight rather than for high protein types.

Offerings were light at Chicago, and outside mills were the principal buyers. Prices of soft winter wheat moved within narrow limits with supplies limited.

Marketings of spring wheat were very light. Durum markets were steadier than those for bread wheat. Foreign markets were slightly lower.

Corn Markets Weaken.

Corn markets weakened along with wheat despite continued light marketings. Demand generally was not active. Premiums for cash grain were reduced one-half cent to 4½ cents at Chicago with the greatest decrease on white grades. Oats markets turned weaker, reflecting a continued slow demand. Argentine oats continued to arrive in moderate quantities, also heavy weight white oats from Russia. Argentine oats were offered at Eastern seaboard markets at 10 cents to 11 cents per bushel under quotations on domestic No. 2 white oats. Barley was unsettled and slightly lower.

Feed markets turned weaker in mid-January with further slackening in demand. Sharp declines in feed grains, slightly lower livestock prices, and less urgent need for feed because of unusually mild weather in Middlewestern and Southern areas were contributing influences.

Although new high tops on strictly choice long fed cattle and on fat lambs were scored in Chicago trading during the third week of January, the market on most classes and grades of livestock turned reactionary as supplies, attracted marketward by recent sensational advances, showed further expansion. The Chicago fat cattle trade aried all the way from strong to 25 cents higher on the very limited supply of choice fed steers and yearlings to as much as 50 cents or more lower on many of the in-between grades and light fleshed killers. A peak of $11.90 was reached at Omaha for heavy bullocks, and despite the decline on cattle grading below choice, many short fed steers were returned to go to the shambles at prices figuring .$5 to $6 per 100 pounds above laid-in feeder costs.

Auburn Automobile Co. reports for the fiscal year ending November 30, net loss of $3,642,499, against net loss of $2,307,973 in the previous year.

Kelvinator Corporation reports for the quarter ending December 31 net loss of $290,322, against net loss of $341,935 in the December quarter in 1933.

United States Leather Co. and subsidiaries report for the year ending October 31 net loss of $1,910,587. In the previous year the company reported for the ten months ended October 31 net profits of $981,019.

E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., for the year ending December 31, earned $3.66 a share on the common stock, including dividends from the General Motors Corporation investment, amounting to $1.36 a share of du Pont stock, the company announced today.

This compares with $3 a common share earned in 1933, including dividends from the General Motors investment, amounting to $1.14 a share on du Pont common.

A dividend of 6 per cent has been declared on the capital stock of the Chr. Heurich Brewing Co., payable at its branch office, corner of Twenty-fifth and Water streets northwest, Washington, D. C., on February 1. The books of the company for the transfer of stock will be closed from January 21 to February 1, 1935, both dates inclusive.

Wool Market.

BOSTON, Jan. 22 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. Agriculture).—Trade in wool thus far this week was quieter than last week. A few bids were being made, and an occasional transaction was being closed on 64s and finer Western-grown wools at prices prevailing last week. Ohio and similar fleece wools were very quiet.

Stocks Yield Fraction Again In Dull Session

Preferred Issues Retain Favor; Sales Cut to 594,170 Shares.

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Traders in the securities markets showed no disposition today to make more than a few cautious sorties from the sidelines.

A few were coaxed into the market to resume their nibbling at the preferred stock list, especially in stocks where dividend resumptions or payments of accumulations appeared a possibility.

Most of the usual active trading stocks showed losses, but recessions were generally confined to less than a point.

Averages Are Off.

The degree of softness may be gauged by the fact that the Associated Press average for 60 stocks at 39.44, was off .39 of a point. Furthermore, transfers aggregated only 594,170 shares, or about 100,000 less than Monday's dull session.

The flurry which occurred in stocks and bonds of the telegraph companies had largely petered out before the close, although Postal Telegraph 5s picked up 2 points on the day, its preferred stock was nearly a point better, and some of the International Telephone loans got up more than a point.

Western Union bonds were narrowly irregular, and the stock closed with no change at 32¼, as did International Telephone, at 9⅝.

Preferreds Move Up.

In most of the preferreds which moved up the buying was in ten-share lots, as has been the case in recent sessions for the most part. However, Mullins Manufacturing, up 6¼ to a new high at 67, and Mengel Co. at 34½, up 6½, appeared frequently on the tape.

Barker Bros. moved up 4¼ to new high territory at 40¾ on light volume, and a new peak was also reached by Armour of Illinois at 9⅞½.

Du Pont at 94¼ showed little response to publication of 1934 earnings of $3.66 a share compared with $3 in the previous period, and the market likewise appeared to ignore the caterpillar tractor report of net last year of $1.94 a share against 16 cents in 1933. The latter stock was fractionally lower at 39.

Grand Union preferred dropped 4¾ points to 23⅛ on announcement that the quarterly dividend had been halved to 37½ cents.

Favorites which gave ground to the extent of around ¼ to ¾ of a point included United States Steel at 38, Westinghouse at 38⅛, Woolworth at 53½, American Smelting at 35¾, Santa Fe at 49¼, Bethlehem Steel at 31⅜.

Battleships.

Some authorities are claiming that for butchering and maiming battleships are worse than useless, they are relics of the past, while upon the deep they're crawling, bombs from airships will be falling, and they'll all be blown to pieces while the nations stand aghast. Every battleship costs millions, paid for by the sad civilians, who, while digging up the taxes, hope the ships will cut much ice; and these voters sometimes wonder why in blitzen, why in thunder, battleships are being builded if they are not worth the price. Argument goes on forever, statesmen wise and statesmen clever, keep on talking of the navy, and they never can agree; some of them have long insisted that the battleships are listed with the hoodoos and the jinxes, with the Jonahs of the sea. All the admirals are saying that for prompt and sudden slaying there is nothing like the vessel that will cost three million bones; when the battleship's in action we may hear, with satisfaction, wails and shrieks of dying sailors, and their curses and their groans. But the airships will be sailing over all this grief and wailing, and they'll drop some giant crackers on the battleships below; and there'll be a lot more dying; and it seems some folks are lying; and the voters keep on paying for a game they do not know.

World Court Point Yielded By Democrats

Leaders Are Prepared to Accept Reservation of Vandenberg.

(Associated Press.)

While debate on the issue crackled back and forth, Democratic leaders yesterday prepared to concede still another point in their effort to bring about American adherence to the World Court.

Those attempting to bring approval of the court resolution were authoritatively reported to be willing to accept the reservation by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

It would state that American adherence does not mean enmeshing this country in the internal politics of other nations and that this country's right to deal with purely domestic questions also would be preserved.

Democrats Claim Majority.

The Democratic leaders have contended they have the necessary two-thirds to ratify the protocol for adherence, but a Southern Senator—Reynolds, of North Carolina—assailed the court yesterday.

Gallery applause greeted a statement by Reynolds recommending another "12 years of debate" if it would prevent American membership in the international tribunal sitting at The Hague.

Reynolds shouted a warning that American entry would take us into the League of Nations and into future world wars.

He spoke after Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, argued for membership and took exception to contentions by Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, that the power of the court to render advisory opinions endangered American freedom from entangling alliances.

Called to White House.

Senators Vandenberg and Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, who has a reservation pending which would require approval by a two-thirds vote of the Senate before any question could be submitted to the court by the United States, were called to the White House late yesterday. Neither would comment afterward.

Vandenberg said he had had no assurances that his reservation would be accepted.

After Senator Norris returned to the Senate there were reports that his reservation was objectionable to the Administration and that an attempt had been made to get him to withdraw it. The Nebraskan, however, made no comment.

Elkins Will Fight Upsets Provisions

$6,000 Is Added to Share of Grandson.

A provision in the will of Mrs. Hallie Davis Elkins, who was the daughter, wife and mother of United States Senators from West Virginia, that any beneficiary of her will who contested the document's validity should be cut off was nullified by Justice Jesse C. Adkins in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

A grandson, Stephen B. Elkins 3d, asked that the will regarding him be declared inoperative. He had been left $50,000 in railroad bonds. His attack was launched by his mother through attorneys Lambert & Yeatman, the mother having been appointed guardian for the boy, a minor.

Because of representations made by the mother, her son's share was increased to $56,000 and was settled out of court. The District Supreme Court was then called upon to determine whether Elkins automaticaly forfeited his bequest when he filed a "caveat" against the will. Justice Adkins ruled that he had not, since the proceedings were through duly authorized agents for him and he had no active part to play.

Georgia Wets Act To Offset Drys' Bill

Repealists' Measure Aims to Break Unit Rule.

Atlanta, Jan. 22 (AP).—A prohibitio nrepeal bill, giving repealists an opportunity to beat the drys at their own referendum game, was introduced in the State Senate today.

Some time ago the prohibitionists got the jump by proposing a referendum on repeal of the bone-dry act, enacted in 1907. It does not require a vote of the people to bring liquor back to Georgia, but the drys figured a referendum would give them the advantage, provided it was on the county unit vote plan.

Today's measure provides for local option in counties that vote for repeal in a State-wide popular vote to be called May 15, if the Assembly approves it and the Governor signs the bill. Should a majority vote for the return of liquor, the act would be ratified and effective. If a majority voted dry, the State would remain dry.

Textile Union Hits Labor Unit Defiers

Officers of the United Textile Workers will appeal to Attorney General Cummings today to prosecute employers who are alleged to have violated decisions of the Textile Labor Relations Board. A statement signed by Thomas F. McMahon, president of the union, and its other officers said at least five companies would be cited.

The statement included a thinly veiled threat of labor trouble.

"We intend, in any event," the statement added, "to secure a better day for textile workers. If we can not do this in one way we shall do it in another."

The statement added that the textile workers' board had approved a plan to form an alliance with other unions, including tobacco, oil, steel and automobiles.

Culbertson on Bridge

Foreign Soil.

Like the beggar, we have, always with us, the better than average player who exhibits a strong game in his own bailiwick but goes to pieces on neutral ground. At home he is a leader, a sound conservative partner. Among his friends, he is an adviser, whose words of wisdom mean something. But when he carries the war to foreign soil, the landmarks are missing, the enemy speaks a different language and confusion becomes his undoing.

Just a case of strange surroundings: battling a higher grade of defense.

The declarer in the following deal was forced to fight every card of the way in an impossible contract to limit his loss to five hundred points.

East, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1♠(1)	2♡(2)	2NT
Pass	3♠(3)	Pass	4♠
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A questionable bid.

2—Hazardous, but West can scarcely keep silent with such a promising pattern.

3—South is between Scylla and Charybdis. He can scarcely pass the bid of two notrump and he has a difficult guess which way to jump.

West opened the six of hearts. Declarer saw that since the double of four spades portended an extremely bad trump break, making contract was probably impossible. He tried to limit his loss. As he probably could not win a second heart trick and might be held to one diamond trick, he must win most of his tricks in trumps and must ruff clubs. Dummy led the spade three. It would be folly to lead the nine of spades since East would have to play an honor in any event to shut out the ten. It was essential to save the spade against eventual over-ruffs of dummy in hearts.

On the trump East played the Jack and South won with the Ace. South then laid down the King of clubs and West won. West led a heart, and East ruffed. East led a club.

It might seem plausible to let this club ride so as to establish one club trick in dummy. From South's point of view the King of diamonds meant a sure entry as West was expected to have the Ace for his heart bid. But South ruffed the club lead, taking every opportunity to make his small trumps.

South now led a small diamond and was shocked to find dummy's King slaughtered by East's Ace. East returned another club. The remaining cards presented a nice double dummy problem—South to play and lose as few tricks as possible. The crux of this problem was how could South cash his Jack of hearts? Two tricks he surely must lose as he had two red losers. His efforts must be directed to getting out East's remaining trumps so as to win a trick with the heart Jack.

South could have ruffed this third round of clubs, but he made the superior safety play of discarding his losing diamond instead. Now West could return a diamond or a heart. In either event the solution of the end problem was for South to play a small heart and ruff with the nine of trumps. East would be compelled to overruff and South would be in a position to extract the balance of East's trumps and cash the heart Jack.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST

When Dr. Bartlett Ralston breaks their engagement, Irene Gardner hasn't the courage to go on nursing at the hospital where he is an interne. She about-faces and is successful in obtaining a job as air stewardess with a San Francisco air line.

When Tom Merrit, a pilot, asks her for a date, Irene decides to play the game men seem to like—a flirtation, a game of hide and seek, but always dodging love. Throughout their dining and dancing, she indulgently listens to Tom's line. On the way home she is furious when he stops the car and suddenly kisses her.

"NO?" he cried in mock surprise. "I'd never have thought it. You are so shy and quiet."

"Not really?"

It was fun, this game they were playing which lasted through the picture and was accompanied by his attempts to hold her hand.

But when they were on their way home the game abruptly ceased. Tom stopped the car, seized her in strong, young arms and kissed her squarely on the mouth. She could not move, could not even cry out against the sudden, furious onslaught of his lips.

"Don't! Oh, don't!" Irene gasped when she was finally released.

"What's the matter?"

"You have no right," she stormed. Then, struck by the futility of her own words, "All right! You've proved your point. Now take me home."

"Have you anything against me?" Tom demanded.

"Certainly not! It just happens that I dislike promiscuous petting."

"Who would have dreamed it?" he murmured, starting the car. "And here I've spent the whole evening thinking you were leading me on."

Well, hadn't she been? In a perfectly innocent way, of course . . . In the cool darkness, her cheeks began to burn.

"Think nothing of it," he said, gayly honest for once. "Merely the salutation of a pilot to a charming little air hostess!"

"We'll let it go at that, anyway," Irene answered.

Bill Was Friendly.

She found the publicity man for the air line loitering about the airport when she arrived there the following noon. Bill Naughton was a debonair, attractive-looking chap in his early thirties. Irene had been told by some one, she couldn't remember whom, that he was engaged to the first air hostess she had met, Virginia Cathcart.

"Very becoming," Bill approved, eyeing the green uniform on the slender girl. "How do you feel?"

"Fine," she boasted.

"I'll bet you didn't have a bite of lunch."

"I didn't care for any."

"Come with me," he commanded, marching her toward the lunchroom. "Never go without something in your tummy, if it's only a glass of milk."

"A glass of milk it is then," she agreed, smiling back at him.

They touched the rims of the innocuous glasses.

"A toast to your career in the air," he cried. "Wish I could use a picture of you instead of the one I'm waiting for."

"What is that?" she asked, swallowing the cold milk.

"Mrs. Astorbilt, who has just divorced her well-known husband, is arriving on a plane from Reno. She is the world's homeliest woman," he added, gloomily. "But it's swell publicity which is all that is supposed to matter in a publicity man's life."

His mock melancholy delighted her no less than his friendliness. And he accompanied her to the plane, lifting her inside.

"Good luck, child!" he said. "You're flying with one of the best pilots in the line, if that's any encouragement to you."

Eddie Fairfield was a shy, quiet, person as unlike Tom Merrit as possible. Irene remembered that he had married one of the air hostesses last week. The co-pilot, freckle-faced and engaging, reminded her of her brother.

Trip Was Uneventful.

She waved her hand to Bill Naughton as they took off from the Alameda Airport for San Francisco.

The trip was an uneventful one. She left San Francisco at noon, arrived in Seattle at 5 and stayed there overnight. The next morning she flew to Portland and back. Left Seattle at 5:30 p. m., waited in Portland for the west-bound plane, which left at 6 in the morning and reached San Francisco at noon, with the remainder of the day off.

They had told her she would need a car to carry her back and forth to the airport so she had invested in a ramshackle second-hand model which waited for her in the parking space outside.

"They're exposed to the wind and fog for hours," the head steward had explained. "So there's no point in buying a good one."

As Irene was driving away, Virginia Cathcart hailed her.

Glad of Company.

"Mine won't start. Mind if I ride with you?"

Grateful for a chance to become better acquainted, Irene opened the door and waited for the other girl to climb inside. Virginia was fair with long, slender hands and a quiet well-bred manner.

"I've been talking to Bill about you," Virginia said. "He seems to think you might like to come to live with Eve Meadows and me. Eve works for a lumber company in Oakland. It was her sister Paula who married Eddie Fairfield last week."

"Where is your apartment?" Irene asked, interested.

"In Alameda. We have a year's lease and it's a lot more comfortable than living in a hotel, but expensive for two. If you'd like to see it we can drive by there and take a look at it anyway."

After the cramped stuffiness of her quarters at the hotel, Irene found the roomy apartment charming.

"It looks so lived-in," she commented.

Eve Was Untidy.

"It is. Too much sometimes. The only trouble Eve and I ever have is over her disorderliness. She is," Virginia admitted, offering cigarettes, "the world's untidiest female."

"It doesn't look untidy."

"Because I went over it myself this morning after she was gone. Don't think I'm crabbing, but you should know the facts before you decide to move in. Eve is a darling and lots of fun, but well, take a look at her bedroom."

There were two of them opening upon a corridor leading from the living room. One with twin beds was immaculate.

"My green and gold toilet set would be perfect in here," Irene thought, already arranging it.

But the room on the other side of the bath almost discouraged her. From doorway to closet, from half opened dresser drawers to the unmade bed it was literally strewn with feminine apparel.

"Did you ever see anything worse?" Virginia demanded.

"Its pretty bad."

"If you'd like to live with us, you can share my room and between us we can manage to keep the rest of the place decently. Eve's really a good scout every other way."

"I'll do it," Irene decided. "If you're sure you'll both want me."

"My dear, you'll be doing us a favor. I liked you the first day you went up with me, and Bill likes you, too," Virginia said warmly.

So it was settled and without waiting to meet Eve, Irene drove to the hotel for her clothes. Five o'clock found her back in the Alameda apartment. There was no dining room, but Virginia explained that the painted table in the kitchen was sufficient for the few meals they had at home.

"Eve gets her dinners downtown," she added. "But when I'm here I like to cook."

"I probably will, too."

"We'll get along famously, then. My the way," Virginia smiled, "Bill is coming for dinner tonight. He's here most of the time when I'm off duty. It's the only way we have a chance to see each other."

"That's the Spirit."

Safe in the knowledge that Bill "liked her too," Irene felt as if she had been adopted by a whole family. As she sat with them at the little table eating deliciously broiled steak, new potatoes and fresh peas, the old life in the hospital seemed very far away.

The sight of the other couple so secure in their devotion made her heart ache for a moment, but with a determined shrug she pushed the thought of Bart from her.

When Bill asked, "What are you dreaming about?" she smiled, "Thinking how lucky I am to be here instead of back in the hospital."

"That's the proper spirit," he approved.

The girls were washing the dishes while he sat at the table and smoked when Eve came home. Petite and vivacious with eyes like stars and the expression of a happy child, she looked as daintily fresh as if she had not worked at all. Irene could not believe that such a white and gold vision could have emerged from the disorder of that bedroom.

In Love Again.

"This is Eve," Virginia said, "and this is Irene Gardner. She has come to live with us." Eve's smile was dazzling perfection.

"Marvelous! Any food left? I'm starved."

She sank into a chair by the table while Bill brought strawberries and cake. It was the first move he had made since his half-hearted offer to help with the dishes, but Eve was the kind men would always be doing things for, Irene thought.

She wondered if Virginia noticed it but if she did the engaged girl gave no outward sign. Her voice was free from jealously as she said, "We'd have saved something else for you but I supposed you'd have dinner before you came home."

"I did," Eve replied, flooding the strawberries with cream. "But I couldn't eat. Nothing tasted right." She sighed and lifted a spoonful of the crushed fruit to her pretty mouth.

"You're probably in love again," Bill said amused.

"I probably am," Eve agreed calmly.
